Description of the Original Seal of Allegheny College

From the Minutes of a Trustee Meeting, July 4, 1817.

To the memory of Larry Pearl Cranford this page is dedicated with the affection of those who deeply feel the passing of a pure, beautiful young life. Though she was not with us during college days, the interests of Allegheny were her interests. Duration time and commencement time brought her back among us with all the ardor enthusiasm of joyous youth. From childhood and happy Preparatory School days, into the beauty of young womanhood, her life has been a bright thread interwoven in the rich and ever-changing texture of our college life. She never grummosness and dignity of her young womanhood colored her in faculty and students alike, and figures like a blessing upon her life.

The Kaidron is an annual chapter in the history of Allegheny's student life. Its purpose is to preserve the records of the past year in such a form as to recall vividly and pleasantly recollections of college days likely to have grown vague in the course of time. In this volume it has been the aim of the editors to present an accurate and interesting account of the activities and events of a year which has been a memorable one for all. If this meets with your approval and if in the years to come you shall find anything of interest, anything that may recall pleasant events of a year at Allegheny, then our work is well done and that of our book begins.

"He rings as true as steel."

No member of the class has had her interests at heart more than Ball. He has worked hard for her and yet so quietly and modestly as to gain little of the credit due him. He has been a thorough gentleman, a true scholar and a man worth knowing. Despite the fact that his pursuit of knowledge has engaged a great part of his time, he has managed to serve his school in foot ball and track and that in an excellent manner.

Helen Maria Dupin, 3 A Mondullo, Pa.

"A soul with a mind of her own.
And a still voice in speaking in life."

Prep. School claimed her first allegiance, but '13 needed a secretary in Freshman year, so Helen joined forces with us, and has been a hearty class enthusiast ever since. She is one of the students of the class and wears an expression of studious seriousness, but withal is well aware that too much study is a weariness to the flesh and knows how to mingle fun and labor in the right proportions.

Max Meigl Chairman, 3 A McKeesport, Pa.

"Music washes away the dust of everyday life."

Then Ethel's life must be witness to thorough housecleaning, for verily her soul is full of music. An unassuming maiden she is, genuine, sincere—and were it not trite, we would say pure gold through and through. Besides being one of '13's best students, she has been foremost in all college activities, a pillar in German Club from her Freshman year, a loyal "Quillar." Y. W. C. A. has claimed her attention, also, and still left time for positions on the editorial boards of the Campus and Literary Monthly.

Besides being one of '13's best students, she has been foremost in all college activities, a pillar in German Club from her Freshman year, a loyal "Quillar." Y. W. C. A. has claimed her attention, also, and still left time for positions on the editorial boards of the Campus and Literary Monthly.

Max Meigl Chairman, 3 A McKeesport, Pa.

"Music washes away the dust of everyday life."

Then Ethel's life must be witness to thorough housecleaning, for verily her soul is full of music. An unassuming maiden she is, genuine, sincere—and were it not trite, we would say pure gold through and through. "He was the mildest mannered man."

Although his last year was spent in the Harvard Medical School, he accomplished things during the three years of his study here. He was President of the German Club in his Junior year, was always active in Y. M. C. A. He has made many friends who admire his perseverance, his industry, his ability. The qualities which have made him a successful student and college man, will enter him far in his profession.

Ruth Frances Balden, 2 K 7
Chicago, Ill.

"Of modest mien."

A type of man who believes in allowing others to talk about it while he does it. He has been with us for four years but has failed to make himself known to more than a few. A faithful member of the class, he has done all that has been asked of him and has ever been ready to do his part in making class affairs the successes they have been. Another of the men whom one would like to have known better.

Sorin Davis Duvall, 3 K 3
Meadville, Pa.

"A man whose very looks betray him."

He began his Freshman year with one big end in view and determined "stick-to-it-iveness" gained it for him. He has been a faithful worker for both school and class and has handled in a manner reflecting credit upon himself his trusts as Editor of the Campus and President of the class. A rather meek and unassuming lad and yet one who has "plugged" his way to the top.

Charles Eugene Milnor.

"A man whom every looks betrays him."

Into every minute of her college life Foresta has infused the enthusiasm of her nature, and her supply seems not in the least exhausted. She has shown herself capable of accomplishing great amounts of work in a short time without losing her happy disposition. In emergencies she is cool and decisive. Her interests have included the Classical Club, Girls' Glee Club, and L' Alliance Francaise. She has also shown loyalty to the cause of girls' athletics and to the Y. W. C. A.

"A true simplicity marks her."

An all-around man is Mechlin, and one of that kind that always seem to have lots of business on their mind and can't stop long. This year he has been building up the muscles of the Theologs over on the other hill, and a good many of us still connect him with that beloved gym. work we did the first two years. Mechlin is one of our special chemistry students and goes on to other work with the best wishes of all. Modern Problems Club, Alembic Club.
Claude Allan Eckels, K + Kano, Pa.

"My speech ill becomes the dignity which I from myself ascribe."

A man for whom Allegheny has done much and one who has tried hard to repay her. He has been active in many lines, but his chief interest has been with Duier-Du, which he has served most faithfully for four years. He has been greatly responsible for the success of this year's production and has perhaps done as much as anyone could to make dramatics the success they have been at Allegheny.

Edward May Deluca, Sheridan, N. Y.

"I am remorseful pray but I am never sad."

Though shy of her opinion and speech, as sincere leader of the girls, Edith has made herself a bowling success. Her ready support of college activities with her different endeavor has been for the name of "Reliability" and also the position of privilege search warrant. As president of the Athletic Board, captain of the Student Ball Team for two successive seasons, and Tennis champion, she has made herself the athletic heroine of her class.

Eugen U. Dittenhafer, Butler, N. Y.

"I climb ship from what she be." Coming to us from the backwoods and the lumber-camp, there was a certain wholesomeness and geniality about Bill which soon made him popular and four years of college have not spoiled him. As president of his class in the Sophomore year and manager of the Campus the following year, he showed managerial and executive ability. However he will be remembered, not for these things, but as one of the shining stars which light the pages of Allegheny's football history.

Richard Bailey Kahl, K + K + Buffalo, N. Y.

"A man among men. always acting the gentleman." One of those who became dissatisfied with his own class and came up higher. And he has proved that he belonged there, too. Dick is one of those fellows who possess the happy faculty of making friends and then "wearing well." He is a happy, good-natured fellow, the kind one notices and remembers. He has not had to do anything to make himself worth while in the class. It was enough to have him here. It is another one of those smiles that simply will not be effaced.

James V. Mates, A T A Butler.

"I don't say much but what I do say I don't mean." He made a lot of noise and did little during his first two years and then he changed the order and did more than ever before. One of the "old guard" in basket ball and one of the best forwards in the business. For the last three years he has been a regular recipient of the big A and has earned it. Somewhat of a tennis player and more of a student. He is another of those who inhabit the chemistry department, but he finds time to make himself one of us in every sense of the word.

Edith M. De Laxd, Sheridan, N. Y.

"I am somebody, s gay but I am near sad." Though chary of her opinion and speech, as cheer leader of the girls, Edith has made herself a howling success. Her ready support of college activities with her diligent steadfastness has won her the name of "Old Reliable" and also the position of the Athletic Board watch-dog. As president of the Athletic Board, captain of the Student Ball Team for two successive seasons, and Tennis champion, she has made herself the athletic heroine of her class.

William H. Dottwyler, M + T.

"A clean chap from chest to bark." Coming to us from the backwoods and the lumber-camp, there was a certain wholesomeness and geniality about Bill which soon made him popular and four years of college have not spoiled him. Fanny McDermott, Union Co., Pa.

"Tired and sleepy lad. With model ope discreet."

One of the charming few of her sex who possesses that rare gift of discreet silence, and whose words when spoken are heard with deference. As a student she is earnest and untiring in her application while the same spirit has shown itself in Die Gesellschaft, Glee Club, and Alliance Francaise. In basketball her proficiency has won for her a place on the champion team, in which capacity she has made herself invaluable.

David Basdell, Dayton, N. Y.

"Slow and sure but—then some."

A man who has given to us all an example of the perseverance which succeeds. After casting his lot with several classes, he found 1913 the most lucky and preferred to graduate under her auspices. His days with us have been given to hard study, and his weekends have been spent in ministering to nearby congregations. As the winner of the Wakefield Oratorical Contest during his Senior year, he has brought great honor to his class.

Maud Irene Beatty, A. S. W.
Oil City, Pa.

She has a way to chase despair.

Through her Innumerable capabi­lities and inexhaustible energy, she has made herself almost indispensable. Student government under her presi­dency has reached a higher plane on a stronger basis, her credit for which cannot be overestimated. An en­thusiast of the most irrepressible type, her spirit has pervaded Klee-o-Kleet, Glee Club and Classes. She is "game" for anything, while her vivacity, ready wit and gracious manner make her the Ufa of Senior teas.

Joseph Cooper Belcher, New Castle.

"One of those rare beings—a good-natured scientist."

To see him rambling over the cam­pus looking thoughtful always and at times even sad, one would never sus­pect that the trend of his mind is toward love-stories; and yet he has been a prolific source of these for every editor of the Lit. But then we never shall know him as he really is. He is somewhat of a moody man, at times pensive to a fault and again joy­ous beyond belief. He delights especially in tennis and chemistry.

Thomas Raymond Fitzgerald, Mt. Pleasant, Ohio.

"A man without guile or deceit."

A genial son of the old sod, "Kelly" has always been universally liked. Has put himself through school entirely by his own efforts and natural aptitude for making money and getting ahead. Those who have patronized him at the bowling alleys can testify to the exceptionally satisfactory way in which he has managed that institution. He has a certain characteristic confidence in himself which cannot help but make a place for him wherever he goes.

Esther Cousins, Hadley, Pa.

"Behold in me a maiden who is shy."

One who has made Allegheny a part of her life, both as a prep, and a college student. An especial devotee of Dr. Cobern and his higher philosophy courses. In Freshman days she led Miss Spalding's gym. classes in every difficult drill, and later proved a wor­thy opponent on the basket ball floor. Her interest in missionary work and in the Girls' Glee Club, added to her faculty for thorough study, has made her a 1913 girl whom all who know respect.

Earl Thompson English, Big Run.

"A pleasing countenance is a silent recommendation."

English has been with the class only at intervals and when he has been with us he has been with us on few have known of him. He is a quiet, unassuming man with a pleas­ing countenance which has had to serve as his recommendation to the class. He is still another of the men who have failed to make themselves a part of the class in its more intimate affairs. He has dealt alone and must be remembered more as a pleasant ac­quaintance than as one of the friends of nineteen-thirteen.
WILLIAM HAYE.
North Bloomfield, Ohio.
"As honest as he is long."
He has taken a great many good photographs and thus has his handiwork in many a memory book. During the illness of Professor Decker, he taught geology; he is likewise an expert along biological and chemical lines. He has the Allegheny spirit of accomplishment and will make good in whatever he undertakes; for he is a careful and conscientious worker. His ambition is to go into sanitary work, and he will do it well.

EDNA DICKY.
Hartstown, Pa.
"There matters every where."
One who has true education for her goal, which she will attain without fail. The high character of her work proves her originality and sincerity of purpose, while her interest in college affairs bespeaks her loyalty. Her sweet and womanly ways win for her friends who appreciate her worth. Higher Philosophy is the sphere in which she revels, to the profound admiration of her classmates and their endless wonder.

AUBREY JAMES HAYES.
Estilltown, Pa.
"A man who knows his own business and can mind it well."
A quiet, unassuming sort of fellow who does not say much until he has something to say—a virtue worthy of cultivation. He is not universally well known, but those who can claim his acquaintance know his worth. Hayes is a good worker and has demonstrated his ability to carry a thing through when he has undertaken it. Never makes a fuss about anything but when it comes to getting something done, he may be counted upon every time.

CLYDE LOUIS NEVINS.
Silver Creek, N. Y.
"Preach the gospel in every land."
His last year he spent at the Divinity School of Boston University. In his three years at Allegheny he sang every year on the Glee Club and managed it his Junior year. He was a 'varsity debater, and a good one; always active in Y. M. C. A., secretary his Junior year; a member of Frater bunch and on a cast, and made enviable records in scholarship. He will make a good preacher.

MARIAN WARD THOMPSON.
Silver Creek, N. Y.
"Wit she hath without desire to make known how much she hath."
Her unlimited originality and good humor have helped the Kaldron Board over many a hard place. She sings up on the Glee Club, she is a member of the Quill, German and Classical Clubs, of Klee-O-Kleet, and on the cast of "The Twig of Thorn," and to each of her varied activities she has brought the same unfailing enthusiasm and faithfulness. She will teach and her scholars will be mighty lucky.

WILLIAM REEVES HOBLET.
McKeesport, Pa.
"He has a most uncommon laugh."
Giving to those who do not really know him the impression of seriousness almost to the degree of solemnity in those who do know him, Hoblet reveals a sense of humor which is all-becoming and underplaying. He is really not half so pessimistic as he seems to think he is. He will undeniably be a good man in the ministry, having shown ability and appetites of purpose in the self-sacrificing way he has served several charges while in school.
Buelah Grauel.
KAO Asptnwall.
"Her heart is not with us."
Despite modesty, we know now that Buelah has been among the best students of her class. Because of her scholarship, she has been assigned a place in the two French Clubs and in Quill Club, while the Glee Club and College Council have demanded her time as well. As summoning member of the Executive Board, she performed her duties with a sense of justice which increased her popularity. Her class made her Secretary in the Sophomore year, and has always counted her a most enthusiastic and dependable member.

Edmund R. Kramar.
O A + Meadville.
"His worst habit is smiling."
He is known to all for a certain cheering smile which greets you upon every occasion. He loves a joke and seems to have a special delight in making one smile. He has tried to do a number of things in school and has done the most of them well. Another man who takes an interest in the class and does all in his power to keep it on top. If he is remembered chiefly for one thing it will be that he carried a smile with him wherever he went.

Evans McKay.
K AO Meadville.
"And he smoked and smoked and smoked."
A mighty likeable chap even if he does awe you at times with that voice of his. He has taken but little part in the affairs of the class, but the little part he has taken has been taken well. One of the "old guards" of the class foot ball and track teams. Another of those chem. students who have lost themselves in Alden and are known only to those who handle the test tubes. And yet with all a personality which is all his own and one which makes those who know him swear by him.

Andrew Rosenberger.
Meadville.
"He thinks his thoughts."
After three years of active work here he went to the Medical School of Western Reserve University. We were sorry he had to go his last year, but... glad that he graduates with us. He was interested in German Club, a good man in his classes, an excellent friend, and he had the rare courage of his convictions and was able to express them well.

James Martin Miller.
Pittsburgh, Pa.
"He doth remember much and tell it well."
Jimmy comes from Pittsburgh and is not at all ashamed to admit it. He even seems to retain some of his old allegiance to U. of P. Yet, in spite of this, it would be hard to find a more popular man among Alleghenians. Since he has been here he has been one of our chief sources of entertainment on all occasions, being a reader of no mean ability. He will be remembered chiefly as a good friend.
Seth Todd Perley, E. J. Erie.

"A modern, young, dashing cavalier."
He has earned his football and track block A's by playing for them, and this last year he was granted a basket ball letter by reason of his successful management of a successful season. In his studies, too, he has made good, specializing in advanced Physics and Engineering. He will most certainly make his way in the world, as he has at Allegheny, successfully.

Helen Harper, Youngstown, O.

"Slight is the subject but not so the praise."
As busy as a bee, she always gets A's, for her intellect is not limited even if her stature is. Her interests center in modern languages which makes her a loyal advocate of Die Gezellschaft and Petit Salon, for both of which she is secretary. In basket ball her skill has made her a formidable one of the champion five. Small with great capabilities and equal to any emergency.

LeRoy Peterson, K. T. Kane, Pa.

"A Quay in politics."
In the natural course of events he should have graduated last year, but owing to the fact that the natural course of events had some unforeseen interruptions—such as a bob-sled accident, for example—he was put back a year. Nor is fat at all unwelcome as an addition to 1913. Pete has been one of that progressive sort of people who keep the school from getting into a rut. Yet the spirit of reform in him is balanced by sound judgment.

"Almost to all things could he turn his hands."
He jumped right into things when he came here and has been remarkably active his whole four years in all lines—from Duzer Du to Y. M. C. A. He never takes anything without a fixed determination to do it, and his best has always been pretty good. This sincerity of purpose and seemingly unlimited capacity for hard work have given him unquestioned leadership in school and we can safely predict for him success in whatever line of work he enters.

Edna A. Yost, E. J. South Fork, Pa.

"Wearing all that weight of learning as lightly as a flower."
Only a three-year sojourner in the realm of '13, but one of the most loyal and enthusiastic of her members. Although making the course in three years, with the reputation of a good student, Edna has escaped the appellation "grind," and has found time for the Girls' Glee Club, German Club, athletics and Y. W. C. A. She is an "outstanding girl" with a host of warm friends.

Owen C. McLean, E. J. Sharon, Pa.

"We are true lovers; raw into strange capers."
From an inconspicuous freshman he has risen into active prominence and that through real merit. McLean was known only a few for two years but when he found himself he came up rapidly. A student of the first class and still a good fellow. He has been interested in all the activities in college while and wherever interested has done more than good work. He is a man known to all the class and one well worth knowing.
Happer B. Beacom, Sheffield, Ohio.

"He has many virtues."

A uniformly good-tempered young man with a small body but big heart. He has been a loyal and interested member of the Classical, Modern Problems and Thoburn Clubs. Also he has always been active in Y. M. C. A. and church work, and is a good student. He will join the ranks of the Allegheny ministers, and will serve well in that goodly company.

Laura Frances Steckland, Cattaraugus, N. Y.

"He has not yet settled and was bland.

She represents scholarship of the highest type and particularly rejoices over Greek. Classical Club finds in her one of its ablest and most interesting members, while Glor Club finds her a leader in its interests. She abounds in the spirit of good fellowship and radiates friendly interest. An interesting conversationalist, she pleases at all times and in all places, which makes her a much desired companion.

Ernest Whitney,
West Springfield.

"Not overlooking the bounds of modesty."

A gentleman in every sense. A conscientious and accurate worker, a good pole-vaulter, and a friend worth having. Those whom he helped as assistant in Biology Laboratory swear by him; he is dear to those with whom he has worked and played and who have come to know him best. Whatever he does, he will do well, for he is a son of Allegheny and a thorough-going gentleman.

Jessie Mathias Thompson,
A.S. '11
Johnstown, Pa.

"Her airs, her manners, all who saw admired."

A valuable addition to the Senior Class after her three years at Wilson. A conscientious student whose notes are legible and much borrowed. Her glad heart and jolly good spirits make her greatly sought after, while her thoughtful kindness and interest in others makes her a friend whom all appreciate and would have more like. She has contributed much through her earnest Hall enthusiasm toward fostering the spirit of general good fellowship among the girls.

Edward J. Hall,
A.T.A.
Russell.

"Salute the quiet, hard-working youth."

From the very first Hall has been "in things." Trying his hand at everything, by hard work and admirable persistence he has made a place for himself at the top. He will be remembered at Allegheny as a 'varsity football man for two years, 'varsity shooter, active in literary and other lines and above all as a good fellow of a rather serious trend of mind, yet a good friend and companion.

Carla Rosalie Hetherington,
N. A. D.
Warren, Pa.

"Nobody so single a man in as there you."

A merry heart whose resiliency can withstand even the heavy weight of senior dignity. Carla is a favorite with all who know her. From her first appearance before the footlights in Klío-O-Klöet, she has been an ardent enthusiast for college dramatics and has proved herself a capable leader as president of Klío-O-Klöet this year. A symbol of the meaning of N. N. E.

Lucy L. Hawk,
A. O.
Meadville, Pa.

"Nowhere so staple a man as he there was."

Few classes can boast of a member who has done as much for athletic Allegheny as Hawk. Working with a whole-hearted interest in the game, playing with every ounce of energy and exerting every part of his skill at all times from the day he entered Allegheny, he has earned and won the name of the best athlete Allegheny has produced in many years. And he has contributed as much by his manly attitude in all contests as he has by his skillful playing. A man who has won a place in Allegheny history.

Mary Cecelia Poux,
Meadville, Pa.

"Quietness reigns."

A true Frenchwoman in every respect, birth, temperament and proclivities. An indispensable pillar of L' Alliance Francaise and Petit Salon. In Glee Club she puts only her best efforts and is one of the reliable few whose presence can be counted on. Her friendliness and ingratiating manner added to her personality make her a town girl appreciated on the Hill. Her diligence shows itself in every department of her work.
Leah Yorkova Smith, A.T.A.

“Far she was just and true to virtuous love.”

One of the few in the class who knew Prep School in its full glory, and who has become so established in the college as to be almost a necessity. An ardent “Die Gezellschaft” enthusiast and a Glee Club warbler. In Klee-o-Kleet she exhibits her rare business ability, which makes her so capable in every line of college life. Womanly and charming in every particular and refreshingly genuine.

John Dick Van Horn, A.T.A.

“Free from deceit his face and free and full his heart.”

“Vask” came to school with a fixed purpose and every part of his four years has reflected his determined effort to live up to that purpose. As a member of the track team for four years, capturing it once, he has gained more than his share of points for Allegheny. He takes a lively interest in every worthy activity and possesses an abundance of that much sought for college spirit. A man who will live in the memory of the class.

Emily Olson, A.T.A.

“Perfect tranquility is the general tenor of her life.”

A student of the highest rank who is contented only with knowing all, but who is not obliged to forego college activities to gratify that desire. A member of the late Scientific Club and one who has added greatly to Quill Club’s spirit and prosperity. An associate editor of the Campus she has also shown her literary ability. Her lovely thought and solicitation for others, with her generosity, endears her to her countless friends.

Elizabeth Lord, Vineyard Haven, Mass.

Miss Lord is a graduate of the Franklin High School, but she comes to us clear from Vineyard Haven on the Atlantic Seaboard, and her cheery smile is as refreshing as a September breeze straight off from Handkerchief Shoals. No matter what may be the stress of the moment, her unfailing optimism is always equal to the occasion. Miss Lord has shown great activity in many phases of the college life, and will leave with us a vacancy that cannot be easily filled.

A. Gordon Earle Hinckley, A.T.A.

“He was the mildest-mannered man.”

There are a few quiet, unassuming students passing daily on the campus, whose personality and capacity impress us more strongly through their calm reticence than by anything they might say. “Hinck” is one of these. He is always on hand with just a quiet little smile, yet when he does speak we are glad to listen. In general activities he takes an active but unpretentious part, and we expect to see him steering his course through the world in the same quiet, competent way as he has done at college.

Agnes Ruth Kelsay, A.T.A.

“If you wish to be valued, make yourself scarce.”

In her Freshman year we chose her for our Gipsy Queen, and a right royal one she made! Ruth is one of the towns members, who, nevertheless, is always on hand at class meetings and who over upholds class enthusiasm and social activity. Despite the Romaniasian atmosphere in which she has been enveloped since her Freshman year, she is an ardent French supporter and lends a sparkling eye and attentive ear to L’ Alliance Francaise and studious grace to Le Petit Bateau.
Dorothy Sansom,  k 4 0
Chardon, Pa.
"And one of heart her very look conveys.''
To "Dot" we have referred our difficulties of every nature, and upon her we have depended for enthusiasm for every worthy movement. Her executive ability has been proved by her successful year as President of the Y. W. C. A. As a most able French student, she has been a power in Le Petit Salon, and this without lessening her ability in other lines. Dorothy has served on many a class committee and has never been unwilling to offer the best of her mind and strength for whatever her class wished to undertake.

Perry Alvion Beck,  k 4 0
Seneca.
"Ah, why should life all labor be?"
The type of man who laughs at obstacles. He has made his education possible wholly through his own efforts and the manner in which he has struggled against seemingly impassible barriers has won for him the admiration of all who know him. Naturally he has had little time for the extracurricular activities, but what little time he has had has been applied well, for his record includes membership in several clubs besides work on two class debating teams.

Annie Ray Bishop,  k 4 0
Versailles, Pa.
"Serene and resolute and still And calm and self-possessed."
This little lady has proved herself almost invincible on the basket ball floor; her agility and presence of mind have been often praised. Again, Annie has appeared as Senior Tea hostess, with the dignity of a true upper-class woman. Her ability in her studies and her faculty for making the firmest of friends have been marvelled at by all. To every committee in which she has had a part and to every phase of her work here, she has given serious attention and valuable support.

Elsie Ethel Williams,  k 4 0
Meadville, Pa.
"Silence, silence, always silence."
You may see her daily wending her way up the hill and over the campus in the same unobtrusive, gentle manner. Always on hand at class affairs, ever ready to do more than her share in the organizing of good times, she has made herself a most indispensable part of the class. She has been active in club life and on the Glee Club. One of the town girls who knew how to overcome that barrier and make herself a vital part of the class.

Victor Weston Fugate,  k 4 0
Dubois, Pa.
"A jolly good fellow."
He tried Penn State twice but finally decided upon Allegheny and 1913. A long and lean fellow with a remarkable love of a joke. Everlastingly "kidding" somebody and yet in a manner which invokes nothing more than a smile. He has not been with us long enough to do much, but he has made himself a part of the life of the class and came into prominence this year by his nervy playing at end on the varsity.

Mary Walters,  k 4 0
Meadville, Pa.
"Kind but not frivolous; dignified but not constrained."
Mary has acquired the 1913 spirit so thoroughly and has got such enthusiasm into her year with this class that we have been proud to welcome her into Senior fellowship. Her contributions in class-room discussion have been notably listened to. To the Chemical Club, Glee Club, and College Council she has given of her best. We shall remember her as a charming hostess at Senior Tea, a capable student and a young woman whose friendship is a chosen possession.
Vera Foster, A. T. A.
Hatfield, Pa.
"What she undertakes to do, she did."
Vera's ability in Y. W. C. A. work, her skill in osteopathic treatment, and her duties as a member of the Hulings Executive Board have kept her in great demand in Hall affairs; yet she has never failed to be cheerful, friendly and cordial and to add one more duty to her many responsibilities. Her taste in matters of decoration has made her indispensable to her class, who have depended upon her many times.

Alfred Alonso Rea,
Linville, Pa.
"Be silent and pass for a philosopher."
A man who moves to and fro among us with an air which has gained for him the respect of the class. He had a purpose in coming and he has pursed that purpose in a masterly way.

Ruth MiriamThomas,
K K Meadville, Pa.
"Always obliging and without offense."
Radiates good cheer at all times and has the enviable faculty of making friends without number. Simply abounding in spirit and never-ebbing enthusiasm for her class. She is one of the chief promoters of all its projects.

Ira McKinney, K K
Corry, Pa.
"And if so fair, from vanity as free."
Always wide-awake to the opportunities of college life, and at the same time thoroughly conscientious in her work, Eva has proved herself an all-around girl as well as a friend of untiring devotion. Her ability along many lines is shown by the different activities to which she has given time and effort and which have gained from her interest: The Y. W. C. A., the Girls' Glee Club, the Classical Club, and the 1913 basketball team, of which she was the manager during the Junior year.

Cythia Vincent Sparling,
K K
Corry, Pa.
"It's always on the jump."
If he had done nothing else, he would be worthy of note as a real student. But in these last two years he has done other things besides keeping up his high standard of scholarship. It is hard to see where he gets time for his self-working his way through school, managing the Campus and the Quill Club and getting into such side lines as debate. However, no one ever saw him when he was not in a big hurry; so perhaps that is the secret of it.

Rose Williams, K K
Corry, Pa.
"She is available, courteous and firm-minded."
The sweet singer of our class, Rose has given us the benefit of a rare talent which may later bring her fame. Through her efforts as Manager and Leader of the Girls' Glee Club, that organization has attained a high place in college life. Her interest has been extended to the Petit Salon, L' Alliance Francaise, College Council, and that most select society devoted to Mutual Nutriturence. But we shall remember her longest for the songs she sang us and for her never-failing smile.

For All That is Contained in the Books You Have Just Read and for the Manner in Which it is Presented We Assume the Responsibility. If it has Met with Your Approval, a Good Part of Our Work is Done, But if it has Failed to Satisfy Your Declaring That We Can But Say That We are Sorry That Our Best Efforts Have Failed to Please and Are to Treat Our Earnest Hope That in the Near Future Some Board Will be Able to Produce to the Satisfaction of All.

And Now We Introduce You to Yourselves. What Follows is But a Reflection of What You Have Said and Done During This Year. For This We Assume No Responsibility. For What May Be Found There You are Responsible. For What is Not There Neither We nor You are Responsible. Enter Upon It, Therefore, and Enjoy, If You Can, the Fruits of Your Follies.

When you idly stroll about the college campus pointing out various objects of interest to friends, or mentally taking note of tree and stone and shrub, does it ever occur to you what hazy ideas we really have concerning these college traditions of ours? Of course there are some features which are simply here and have no history, yet are none the less prized and held dear by every student. Such are the Bell Rope Tree, ivy-covered, and beautiful ever, whether in the tender leafage of spring or in the royal robes of autumn; the Gothic Arch, attractive in beauty alike whether seen in foliage outline or in the delicate curves of twig and branch when the trees are barren of leaves; the Rose Window, seen from in front of Bentley, framing the distant scene of hills now violet in mist, now green in the light of the sun. These are the gifts of nature, along with the Lyre Tree, the Seven Sisters, and the Land of Knowledge.

But there are other objects of beauty and interest about the campus the history of which we may learn if we will but listen to the voice of the past. You have noticed the little ivy growing on the cast end of Bentley Hall just beneath the window of the President's office. This ivy was planted with much ceremony by the class of 1900. The whole story is told in a volume of the Literary Monthly for that year, and he who seeks may read. There in the Circle of Pines, planted one tree for each member, by the class of '73. It is still complete but for one tree which died and has been cut down. Every freshman learns the story of this circle perhaps first of all the college traditions. The elm tree along the North Main Street walk out from the Library, planted by W. P. McElwain, ’93, bears a silver plate high up on the trunk, embossed in the bark, which marks this tree as one of more than passing interest. Perhaps not everyone is aware that the pine tree out from the north-east corner of Wilson Hall was planted by Bishop Thoburn in his student days, though we of the present generation may point with pride to the tree planted by him this year south of the Gymnasium. The trethe north-east corner of Bentley any time and read them. The red paint makes the former difficult of perception at first glance, but it is worth a searching second glance.

Everyone knows the Sophomore Stone just east of Bentley Hall to the left of the walk leading to Chapel, with its inscription,

"Spes sihi quisque Sophomores of Class of 1880."

But not everyone knows the history of the modest little stone. In the spring of ’78 it was brought from the fields on north of the campus on a stone boat by the class of ’80. The Freshmen, desiring to prove ’80’s mettle, rolled the stone into the ravine. But ’80 was equal to the task of proving their determination to leave on the campus a lasting memorial of their Sophomore year. They got a block and tackle from the Eric Railroad Company and while the Freshmen were out for the evening, about ten o’clock the work began. All sound was muffled, the tackle was applied, and the stone glided on a well-greased plank up to the top of the hill. By three o’clock the work was finished and no trace of it remained next morning but the proud stone again lay in state in its place. This time it was protected by an armed guard of ’80’s members, and Bentley for a time constituted a garrison for the protection of the Sophomore Stone. Needless to say, the Freshmen were convinced of the spirit of their rival class.

But not only local traditions go to enrich our Campus lore. It is rumored that George Washington’s feet trod our campus in days long ago, and the willow tree at the juncture of the Chapel, Bentley and Library walks is pointed out as being near the spot where he once rested. This may be myth, but true historic tradition we have in the old flag borne by Company I of the Thirty-Ninth Regiment in the Civil War, a company composed to go from the college to the front of battle. To-day the granite boulder bearing the copper escutcheon, in front of Bentley is a lasting reminder of these soldier boys and the sailors also who went from Allegheny to the service of their country.

Those who wish to may see the signature of Lafayette in the old college guest book, and also that of Harriet Martineau, the English poetess, advocate of free thought and social reform, and writer on political economy, history and biology.

The sun dial and rustic bridge have been added in our generation, and they too, ere long, will be looked upon with the veneration due to age, even as now they are valued for their primal interest and beauty. And so, year by year, our wealth of campus lore is increased and the history of our college traditions becomes enhanced by each new addition.
Some ninety or a hundred years ago seven trees grew up from the parent root and in each dwelt a beautiful maiden, a Hamadryad. These maidens were permitted to leave their home in the trees each night during the vernal equinox, on condition that they be back safe in their leafy bower at the first ray of dawn. But one moonlight-silvered night, the youngest and fairest of the seven, while out among her sister maidens, beheld a student youth strolling through the campus. She followed him, drawn by love of his noble character. All unawares the busy-fingered dawn began to lift day's tapers. The beautiful maiden was far from her bower home, and could not return. She was lost—a homeless spirit doomed to wander forever in the moonlight about the campus lawns; for the tree which had sheltered her, touched by the rays of dawn ere her return, was blighted and died, leaving her sister trees to mourn the lost one.

Song of the Biol. III. students during earth-worm dissection.

"Count your segments, name them one by one,
Count your segments, till dissection's done;
See the pharynx, crop, and gizzard too,
But count your many segments, first thing that you do.

Chuck Botterers' Version.

Nice fat hell bender in the brook,
Chuck will catch him with a hook;
Bring him in to Biology class,
Frighten many a nervous lass.

Mr. First's Version.

Little brown mud-puppy in a tub,
First will give you some toothsome grub.
And, p'raps, if you're good as you can be,
Lucile Lippitt will come set you free.

Dr. Breed's Version.

Interesting species of salamander type.
We will keep you safely till the time is ripe;
Then we'll ship you Eastward to a school, where,
We're told.

They pay for Cryptobeachus fifty cents a head.
A Wild Night in Dellalnd

Bardine L. started the commotion. He was out beating rugs as an after supper catalyst, when Prex summoned him in for a specious phone call. Poor Agony had just more than climbed the back steps when—splosh—Vick polished him off from top to toe with a whole pailful from the bathroom window. "O ugh!" gasped Bard similar to ten Annette Kellerman's coming up after a record breaker, and with that first breath he cut loose in a vernacular that shriveled the very grass on the doorstep crisper than a prairie fire. Meanwhile the Brothers Ramsey found their best doorknob missing. Suspicion pointed towards Vick and Prex and their doorknob had just been surreptitiously removed when the owners chanced on the scene. What vengeance dire followed the Rape of the Door-knob. What screw-drivers flew and brogans beat on the hall carpet as Heavy Foot and Jack-askey struggled for the prize. And when the dust of combat cleared the lambent flame from a broken Welsbach revealed several dismantled rooms, broken furniture, yea, broken heads, but no door-knob.

Somewhat later Prexy was called to the 'phone. Highly astonished not to find a wad of paper stuffed over the receiver-hook, he was answered—more unusual still—by a soprano voice. "Prex has a girl on the line." the news flew down the hall. Bang! There came an armful of magazines down the well from the third floor. Wow! That was Chuck Flick impersonating a tom-cut through the speaking tube that opened just over the phone. "Tell Prex! He said I was to meet him. I want my five dollars you owe me."

"Robert, give me back my B. V. D.'s."

As Bardine was still out at bedtime the third floor contingent, namely Gloupy Hoy, Chuck and Jim, laid a trap for him on the stairs. What vengeance dire followed the Rape of the Door-knob. What screw-drivers flew and brogans beat on the hall carpet as Heavy Foot and Jack-askey struggled for the prize. And when the dust of combat cleared the lambent flame from a broken Welsbach revealed several dismantled rooms, broken furniture, yea, broken heads, but no door-knob.

Between Bentley and Hulings Hall stands a great silver poplar, which, with little exercise of the imaginative faculties, one can trace in the form of a hand. Seen from the walk near Bentley, the hand is opened with palm facing, the thumb extending out, pointing over the walk—the hand. Seen from the walk near Hulings, the hand is closed in a fist, the fingers curling inwards—folding the fist. Seen from the walk near both, the hand is spread outwards, embracing all. In the spring time the leaves are silvery, all aflutter in the breezes, in the fall they become golden, even as the knowledge of youth, glistening in the first consciousness of being, grows mellow and golden, stored in the mind, laid up as Cato suggested for the rich fruitage of old age.
Senior Dignity

If you spied a Wicher at a football game,
Yelling, cheering, shouting Allegheny's name;
If you saw Miss Griswold rushing off pell-mell,
To Library or English V before the 8:10 bell;
If you watched Miss DeLand there in Hulings Hall,
Dashing down the gym floor with a basket ball;
If you saw Ben Ball rid of hat and coat,
Chasing Dad Ling on the campus after a Physics note;
If you spied a Sparling racing down the hill,
As tho' it were required of him to take gymnasium drill;
If you heard a Billy Wells whistling through his fingers,
With a shrillness that doth startle, and a memory that lingers;
If you saw Miss Hutchinson rushing into dinner,
Racing with Miss Foster, who really was the winner;
If you watched McLean at one of the Senior affairs,
Balanced on a broom-stick, knocking caps from chairs;
If you heard Miss Beatty, when all rear corridor is calm,
Giggle and laugh uproariously with her friend Miss Tomb;
If you watched a Storer, shy as he can be,
Slying drinking scores of cups at weekly Senior Tea;
    You would surely say,
    We knew it was that way;
    And would make a plea
    For Senior dignity!

Do You Know Them?

The gentleman in question has long, waving locks of auburn hair; very probably he needs a shave. Often he looks as if he had wandered in the Elysian fields of poetry, been caught in the rain and slept in his clothes. Withal he walks around with a swinging stride, speaks in a nasalised tone but always says something worth listening to.

If you should meet a young man with rather prominent ears and he should talk French at times in a deep bass voice, what would you say? If he thought further that he was a perfectly indispensable adjunct of the college, and was fond of saying, "inasmuch as it has been deemed advisable by the faculty—" could you name him then? If you might see him any day in earnest converse with the Dean or walking ever towards the hall with his toes pointing the wrong way—well, would you know him then?

Here's a man the ladies would like ever so much if he could only straighten his shoulders. A big, athletic looking fellow who says little but does much. You will see him any day standing around with his hands in his pockets, doing nothing but look.

Very, very, very gracious, very full of dignity. Ambles around the campus making an angle of twenty-six and forty-seven degrees with sidewalk, passing you to-day as if she had never seen you and greeting you to-morrow as if she had known you for ever so long. Would far rather walk down the hill than run for a car. She is collecting the material for a book on Co-educational Etiquette and says she has unlimited material for illustrations of the chapter on "What not to do."

You know her surer than fate. She has never been known to be on time for anything but a stroll with—well you know. May be seen any morning running for an 8:10 after the last bell has rung. Kneel cool.

She always has some one or joke to tell and her big dark eyes grow all mysteriously serious just before she explodes the bomb. She bewails the lack of conversational ability among the girls at her table and woefully declares that men and marriage are the girls sole topic of conversation. She is ever ready with a smile and is usually seen with Miss Beebe.
And here's a young lady with an excellent name and a better disposition. She is beautifully tall and slender, has large, deep blue eyes and seems always to be in a hurry. Yet at times she must run for an 8:00 English class. She can quote as much poetry as Flossie and writes it well, also. And you would be sure to know her if you saw her smile.

You have heard this young lady on the Campus, in Bentley, or in the Hall, everlastingly calling her name, in a high nasalised tone. She does as she pleases and does not care whom she pleases so long as she pleases herself.

You get this fellow from his characteristic pose, hands in pocket, shoulders drawn up and curved around his chest far enough to allow them to flirt with each other, a quizzical look on his face ever threatening to break into a smile and always ready with a pun. At times seems to be in a grouch and in fact he can seem to be whatever lie feels like being. A little runt, but, oh my, how funny.

There is a figure that goes stalking up our walks every day with that long, swinging, aggressive stride which leaves all lesser voyagers in the dust of departure. Those substantial feet, you are sure, would spurn beneath them with indifferent ease the furrowed field and paraffine polished floor. Up Bentley's steps it goes in two jumps, convict hair-cut in the lead and coat tails flying out astern like Ichabod himself. A stentorian voice rings down the hall. You've not looked up, but merely felt the draft as the holocaust swept by, yet you shrug your shoulders and promptly deprecate, "The Angry Mob."

We have with us one character that is completely sui generis. That lank, angular build, the stand-up collar and loose fore-in-hand far below an ingenuous Caledonian countenance surmounted by close-cropped hair and a jaunty green cap, yes, these are unique.

Throw in a penchant for religious and philosophical topics, ask Fitzgerald who took him for a "blooming, bally ijiot" and you'll have it.

Talk or Conversation?

"Lo, Bill."

"Lo, Jack."

"Some day?"

"How you feelin'?"

"Punk. Went to that crazy lecture over at the Chapel last night."

"What was it about?"

"Pictures."

"Movies' pictures?"

"New, art. Ever hear of Giotto?"

"Is he the guy that pitches on the Chinese ball team?"

"No. Say, have you heard how the chinks are making out?"

"Guess they have some team. You goin' to take your girl to the game?"

"If somebody don't beat me to her again."

"Heard you got stung the other night. Is that right?"

"Sort of got one slipped over on me, I guess."

"Where you headed for now?"

"Got to go up to the Library and read some dope about the tariff for Economics."

"Hard luck. Peach of a day for a walk."

"Got a date for one at three o'clock."

"Goin' out to look for birds, I suppose."

"Oh, yes. All I'm goin' to do is talk about birds and flowers and Shakespeare and such stuff."

"Well, hope you have a good time."

"Thanks. Better get your girl and come along."

"Don't see you. Have a tennis match on."

"So long."

"So long."

"Turned Down by Lt."

How sweet the thought when daylight fades away!
The golden twilight o'er us softly creeps,
As we ponder o'er the duties of the day
Our heart for truer service ever leaps.
Then follows that, our blessed night of black,
A time when we to God should be sincere
As 'neath His starry heavens we stand back
And view Thy great creation.

Oh, how queer! —
Sol. Taylor, E.

A Bird Trip

When you write a letter home and casually men­tion the fact that you got up this morning at 4:30 and so feel rather sleepy and that you must close now as it is pretty late, does your solicitous mother send you a telegram or an S. P. asking if you are sick and saying that she never had any success getting you out of bed before 8 o'clock and that she wants to know what wonder it is Allegheny is working on you to make you get up at 4:30, why, then—where? I'm out of breath—why, then, how do you explain to her that it's only a bird trip that has wrought this marvel?

You object because I say only a bird trip? You are right! Its value must not be depreciated, for think of the fun, you deprive from the expeditions along with the educational worth.

You hear your alarm-clock give the first warning tinkle but you try to forget it and drowsily go back to your dream about that queer man that was crawling up and down the banister with a chicken in his pocket and a sunbonnet on his head and a rolling pin in one hand. You have seen that face before, but you just can't think for the life of you who he is,—but wait!

Now you almost remember, you nearly have it, and—oh, dear! there goes that intermittent alarm-clock again! You simply have to get up and shut that off, and so you look at it and you see half-past four. Oh! Now you remember that you had intended the night before to go on a bird trip, and so you hussle with your dressing, sneak down the backstairs, grab a pickle and a bun from the cupboard, and your bird-book and opera glasses from the washing room table, and clam­beriously you tip off the back porch. Now you feel free, and you draw a long breath and munch at your bun and the pickle while you run up college hill to join the crowd.

Promptly at 5:30 you all start off for the stone­quarry. Suddenly Mr. First stops, applies his lorg­nettes to his eyes and in a self-assured manner an­nounces, "Here we have a red-eyed vires." Eagerly pushing each other aside you prepare for a bird's-eye­view of the winged creature afflicted with the pink­eye. On about you see two or three fames to be climbed in going across lots, and you groan, but as you near one, Mr. First very considerately discovers a bird in the tree back of you. Through the deep wet grass you wade without hesitation and without rub­bers, although if you had to run across the campus grass since a rain you would vow that as a result of it you were going to die of pneumonia. But listen!

Someone is frantically calling and waving her arm for you to come quickly, and so you lodge under the branches of a low tree, catch your hair on a thorny twig and scratch your cheek; but that doesn't matter just so you get there in time to see that bird. As you come near you walk more cautiously, but even then, just when you get the leaves adjusted, Mrs. Grosbeak considerably flies to the limb of another tree fifty yards away. What is it Mr. First is muttering to himself? Something about a cowbird? Quick, write that down, never mind looking for the bird. Thus with the aid of Mr. First's soliloquies and your own vivid imagination your list grows up to thirteen or fourteen birds, which you count over as you walk along the road back to town. Wait a minute! You hear a catbird and that's one you haven't written down yet, and so you turn toward the tree in front of that old farm house. It's nothing but an old cat standing on the porch waiting to be let into the house. But anyway you put catbird down on your list, for aren't birds often recognized only by their song and call?

Well, you get back to the Campus just as the 8 o'clock bell is ringing. You are ravishingly hungry, but cheer up, you will get home for lunch at one o'clock. Anyway you have Biology I class now; therefore you resignedly drag your weary feet up to the third floor of Ruter, your shoes covered with mud, a tear in skirt and scratches on your face but a comfortable feeling because you have nearly all your fifty birds.

Hulings Window Committee in Session.
Personnel. Speaks for itself.
Time. 7-7:30 every Sunday evening.
Time. Second floor window to right of entrance.
Scene. Widow, maiden ladies, and minors collected en masse on window seat, bed-side, chair back and dresser corner.

"Say, aren't they slow to-night, I haven't seen anyone come yet, have you?"
"As evidently, who leads Y. W. C. A."
"Say, isn't he a never ending talker, though?
Ethel Hayard was afraid she wouldn't get out in time to change her dress."
"She didn't know whether she wanted to or not anyway."
"By the way did you ever notice how early she gets in on Sunday night?"
"I bet that's why she is always the first."

(In unison.)
"Here they come, look, they're coming!"
"Look, will you."
"Where, which way, who?"
"Here get your head out of the way. I can't see through you."
"For heaven sake turn out that light; they'll see us."
"There now quit digging your elbow in my neck."
"Whose place is this anyway?"
"Some one's yes, you, do leave back."
"Here let me in front, I'm all dressed."
"(In unison.)"
"Here they are now. Oh, it's the Phi Gams."
"What are those things in their hats, pray?"
"Their cards, did you ever? They are always up to some stunt."
"Why, there is Potts. What are you doing here, lady?"
"Something happened, Maggie."
"You're too good for him anyway."
"Ha, here are the Phi Psi's and Galbraith. Who is that lad behind Richard Benton?"
"Taylor."
"Say, he's more than blossoming out, isn't he?"
"What in the name of time is that racket over head?"
"Oh, it's just Thelma rushing about; she must have seen him come. Go up and squelch her, Irene."
"Say, those Sigs who own nobby."
"Look at the bunch of them, will you."
"Ofid, some of them are Delts. Can't you tell Blossome yet?"
"Here comes Sparling to claim his own. Say Little, is your tried and true?"

Comedy in Three Acts, with Happy Ending

Time—One evening.
Place—Cheestnut Street.
Characters—Dr. G. A. Mulfinger—"Dutch" Fahr.

ACT I.
SCENE I.
Exit Dr. G. A. from front door of home arrayed in dress suit, very immaculate with exception of white tie which is replaced by green four-in-hand. Dr. G. A. walks down town to buy new white one to be worn at Round Table banquet.

SCENE II.
Dr. G. A. arrives in the metropolis only to find that all stores are closed. Swiftly he passes from Mendels, to Smiths, to Oldman's, to Veith's, but all to no avail. It is past six and the white shall not be worn to-night. Slowly lie turns and wends his way toward the Round Table, meanwhile thinking how lie shall explain his newly adopted color.

ACT II.
SCENE I.
Enter "Dutch" swinging in long strides down Chestnut Street, lie stops transfixed by a brilliant light and after some trouble locates it. Awed, lie stares at the tie and is rooted to the spot. "Aha," cries Dr. G. A., "here comes a lad whose father sells white ties. I will, forsooth, encounter him."

"Mister Fahr, how do you do? Say, Mr. Fahr, I thought I would stop you to tell you that my little hound destroyed my dress tie. I have to go to a banquet right away. Now, Mr. Fahr, don't you think you could get in your store and procure a tie for me?"

"Dutch"—"Why I'm afraid not Doctor, but if you will come with me, I'll lend you one."

Dr. G. A.—"Well, now, that would be very kind of you Mr. Fahr. I will go with you to your home."

ACT III.
SCENE I.
Curtain rises on Dr. G. A. struggling with an elusive collar button and a slippery tie. Finally "Dutch" enters, manipulates button and tie and Dr. G. A. emerges resplendent in his new acquisition and the Round Table is allowed to go round.

Miss Harper (in Anglo-Saxon, declining a noun)—"No ma, no man, no man, etc."

Professor Swartley—"I can't imagine what Miss Beatty and Miss Ricker are laughing about."

"He's working hard!"
First in order you see the early birds come slipping in; they take a peep at Doc. Lee's new auto wheel in the office, kid the Chem. 10 sharks awhile, and pass on, making scientific shots for the coat-hooks en route. At last, you don't get that old straight-backed chair. Everyone shuffles it off on the next man in; Ten's Smith comes in for the last deal this time and sits up the pot considerably.

Back swings the door, and in walks the solution agent. Violent precipitation of action in the chair section, with somepeculius-going boiling.

"All books closed. Now class, place yourselves upon your proper apperceptive basis. Yoocum, up off the floor, no more sitting on your shoulders; you've been lying down on this course for the last month, I'll notice, class, the solution, placed here last week has risen five inches above the top of the tube. If you were closer—Ah! Mr. Welker, just step this way. Here's a minister to examine this apparatus; now you know you have the correct answer."

Hang! (as a tilted chair comes down on the floor). Lmmm-Yes, (fixing him with a fishy eye), Mr. Delp, that's just the way you fell down in your test Saturday. Ah—Miss Downing? Why does that osmosis tube have a black patch on its sorface, you say? Quite right—quite right. That's where we attached the vegetable membrane. The inside diameter at absolute zero, you say?—Hmmm—Well-if, I'll have it measured by Sunday and if you'll come around. Certainly. Certainly."
The Lyceum Tree

In this view of one of Allegheny's most celebrated trees the classic and romantic are blended with an artistic effect unsurpassable. Looking past the doorway of Ruter, beautiful in classic simplicity of architectural detail, we see the tree planted in his student days by Jonathan Hamnett, so long connected with the college as student, instructor, Emeritus Professor, and Librarian. This tree, grown into the perfect form of a lyre may well arouse the imagination and stir the romantic sense in every beholder. One might almost fancy that Orpheus brought strains from this living Lyre which lured the Hamadryads from their home to dance in the moonlight when that fatal tragedy occurred which robbed the campus of one of the seven sister trees.

"Oi-yoi-yoi, but I am tired," groaned the Senior engineer as he carelessly threw his bundle of stakes and his chain in the corner, hung his cap on the floor, filled his pipe from the little red can and settled down upon his bed for a snooze. He had been out all afternoon on a field trip and had been mercilessly kidded by "Dut" about getting Phi Beta Kappa. He had retorted in every way known to one of the "riff-raff" and then had given up in disgust. What did he care whether or not he would be able to buy six inches of silk ribbon at Commencement time and hang a key on the end of it. There was absolutely no chance for him and he did not mean to let "Dut" kid him again about the thing. Grumbling something to himself about rather having the price of a Yale key in his pocket than nothing in his pocket and a brass key on the outside, he gradually dropped off to sleep.

He was soon being entertained by a fantastic panorama in which a tennis racquet chased a thesis all over the campus and finally threw it off the rustic bridge, only to be arrested and led off to prison by a gold key attired in a dress suit. But soon his dream took more definite shape and he found himself reading from a piece of paper, bearing the insignia of a skeleton key, an invitation to be present, the following morning at three thirty-three, at the College Hot Air Plant, for initiation into the mysteries of Phi Beta Kappa. He could hardly believe his eyes, but he hesitated only a second and then jumped into his most crumpled-looking clothes, joined a number of other members of the "riff-raff" who bore in their hands copies of the same invitation and hastened to the "little red building in the hole." Arrived there they expected, grouped around the smoke stack, a grandly mannered becloaked and behooded, shadowy figures and all of that number the only one he recognised was the Man Who Put the Chap in Chapel.

The ceremonies were delayed for some time owing to the absence of the Grand Pajandum, who, it was later learned, had been busy trying to lose his precious life beneath the cruel wheels of a trolley car. At last the 6 a.m. arrived with the "arbiter of his destinies" at his heels and then the mystic ceremonies began. In deep, stentorian tones he pronounced the opening exercises, wherein he emphasised the great value of knowledge and the modern methods of attaining to it. Then at a given signal the black robed individuals advanced from their position near the stack and proceeded to the questioning of the candidates.

"Oi-yoi-yoi," again groaned the Senior engineer, with tremblings in voice and knee, "here's where I..."
pass out. I’ll never be able to answer all the questions those high-brows from Bentley ask me.”

“Why, after all, I say,” (To the S. E.) “Why-er, I’m writing a play in three acts and four ten-cent in­ territions.”

“Hey, you there! What have you ever done that deserves recogni­tion,” came the first question.

Oh, what’ll I say,” gasped the S. E. “ Why-er, I’ve finished three of the intermissions,”

“Let them now be put to the final test,” cried one classical Club man visions of the grave, he pronounced the three words:-

Bang, biff, and two pillows well aimed caught the dozing Senior on the head and rudely brought him back to the realization that he was but a humble C. E. and could never hope for more than a “Riff-ratf” emblem.

There was no time for “Kid” Miller to discover the reason for this disturbance, for Prexy had just given the fateful and so Devay, and the congregation rose as one man to sing the Doxology. But Kid, and Jimmy too, decided to corner Bill during the exercises and find out what ailed him. However, they found the tables turned on them for while they were in the midst of their dark designs, part of the regular service was omitted and while they plotted with bowed heads, Bill sat beside trying to contain his laughter. The service was over, and the Seniors marched out two by two to the strains of “Toreador,” hummed in moumental meaning, until they entered the shelter of the Phi Gam tennis court, he was intercept­ d by a small lady. Jim and Kid, lingering near, heard the conversation.

“Mr. Dotterer, Petit Salon in the parlors of Hillings Hall next Monday at four. Be sure to come and bring ten cents.”

“Yes, Miss Harper. Thank you for the informa­tion.” (To Jim and Kid) “I knew it, I knew it. But what could I do? I’ve got to go to that “saloon” because I can’t say I didn’t know about it. Oh, what’s a fellow to do when he Ant to go to Chapel, and then he’s jumped on at every fence post?”

Bill was evidently in no humor to talk pleasantly, so Kid left with a parting shot.

“Say, Bill, tell me about the meeting of this pe­ttage tomorrow, so I can put it in the ‘Campus,’ will you?”

“Will you put in what I write?”

“Sure, for you know I’ve got to have something for news next week. Klaw-N-Kish can’t decide yet, in spite of my efforts to hurry them up, and it was so rainy that hardly anybody went home over Sunday. So you write up that meeting in full and give it to me Monday night, will you?”

“OK, I suppose so,” Bill muttered.

But Bill’s experience was so much more overwhelming than he expected that he had not the heart to write it. It was something like this:

Thirteen dainty mademoiselles and one monsieur, le professeur Snavely, greeted Bill as he entered the parlors of Hillings Hall. Bill Dottorere surprised his classmates by insisting on a seat in the extreme rear of the Senior section in chapel.

“Mr. Dotterer, Petit Salon in the parlors of Hillings Hall next Monday at four. Be sure to come and bring ten cents.”

“A Tale of Bill Dotterer and la Petit Salon

On a certain Saturday Bill Dotterer surprised his classmates by insisting on a seat in the extreme rear of the Senior section in chapel.

“One, two, three, four,” cried the Senior, section, who was evidently in no humor to talk pleasantly, so Kid left with a parting shot.

A Tragedy in Four Acts

A TTENTIiN5-1iiNIOliNESS

ACT 1.

Scene laid in Dr. G. G.'s domicile. Dr. Benjamin asks bride of few weeks to accompany him to the Bull Moose convention.

"Oh, that will be fine, Bert," replies Mrs. G. G., enthusiastically.

"All right, then we will go. I'll be back as soon as the Modern Problems club meeting is over. Good-bye."

ACT 2.

Scene laid in Modern Problems Club Room. After discussion for an hour on "Is woman the intellectual equal of man," Dr. Benjamin arises and says:

"Mr. President, move we adjourn and attend the Bull Moose meeting."

Motion seconded and passed.

"This meeting stands adjourned."

All members go with Dr. G. G. to Bull Moose convention.

ACT 3.

Scene same as scene 1 but more agitation. Mrs. G. G. walking the floor and keeping eye on clock.

"7:45 and Bert isn't here yet. What can have happened?"

Reads from Beard's book, digests three or four magazines.

"8:00. Gilbert is very late. I do wonder where he can be."

"9:30 and he isn't here yet. What can have happened? I guess he must be having an important meeting."

"10:00. Maybe he is at the meeting."

"Mrs. G. G. (interrupting)—"Do you mean to stand here and tell me that is where you have been? * * * Curtain.

ACT 4.

Scene same as acts one and three. Dr. G. G. arrives home about 10:30. Mrs. G. G. meeting him at the door.

Dr. G. G. (enthusiastically)—"Oh, you ought to have been to that meeting. That was the greatest.

Mrs. G. G. (interrupting)—"Do you mean to stand here and tell me that is where you have been? * * * * * * Curtain.

Every Sunday Evening

A One Act Skit.

Scene laid in two Hillings Hall Parlors.—Time, from 7:00 to 7:15 p. m.

Curtain rises on several of the old guard and a couple of new recruits seated in favorite corners or at the best vantage point. The new recruits seem all eyes, watching every move made by the maid and by any one else. They examine the carpets, look around anxiously to see if there is anything in the room that will reflect their images, look at their shoes, fix their collars, etc., ad infinitum. The old guard, sit back nonchalantly, wishing that "that girl" would hurry up, kidding the new men and greeting each newcomer with some appropriate term of endearment. The recruits after five minutes begin to show signs of nervousness when suddenly—buzz-buzz goes the bell and everybody knowingly mutters, "Here come the Phi Gams."

In come the little Dotterer boys, "Spurg" Miller, and "Evie" Weidle. Chuck takes position in door and surveys both interior and exterior. "Dick" Kahle, who has been waiting not less than seven minutes and who is expecting to see a certain beaming countenance every moment, shouts:

"For the love of Mike, Chuck, if you're going to stand up, get out of that door." "Chuck" sits down and then the exodus begins. "Bill" Dott takes up his position near the door and calls them off. Suddenly the door opens and in slides "Jimmy."

"Bill" Dott—"Gwan back and ring the bell you runt."

"Jimmy," worried—"Say, Bill, what's that girl's name I'm going out with to-night. I knew we mixed them up but I never thought I'd get mixed up that bad."

"Bill" Dott takes up his position near the door and calls them off. Suddenly the door opens and in slides "Jimmy."

"Bill" Dott—"Gwan back and ring the bell you runt."
Out goes Bill and in comes Thoburn, ambling slowly over to his place in the corner with nary a word or smile.

"Little late, aren't you Bill? Must have known who was leading Y. W. C. A."

Bill—"Might as well wait down at the house as come up here and sit around."

"Hard luck you're not in on this "pot" Bill. You run a pretty good chance of winning."

Crowd gradually dwindles away until Jimmy Miller and Bill are the only ones left. Finally Jimmy scrapes in the nickels, grabs his hat and hat box; leaves Bill still waiting.

As the curtain falls at 7:45 Bill is seen on the cozy corner fast asleep and yes—still waiting.

Our Absent-minded Friends.

Dr. Benjamin, showing friends through his new home, "Now I want you to see our dining-room. We are very proud of it, my wife and I, for we selected the furnishings ourselves. Just notice how sunshiny the room is. With a flourish he swings open a door, and steps aside that his guests may enter first. Tie looks in vain for their expressions of delight. The door opens upon the cellar steps.

A Complaint.

Mr. Swartley met Miss Beebe going chapel-ward

Said Mr. Swartley to Miss Beebe

"Dost know that Kaldron Board?"

Said Miss Beebe to our Swartley

"Yes, and I've a fault to find," For now I'm on the faculty

"They've left me far behind."

Chuck DoUerrer (calling up Pierrepont Nichols)—"Hello, Pierp., say what are you going to have at your church to-night?"

Nichols—"A picture-sermon, the Winning of the West."

Chuck—"Oh, that so? Well-ah-say, just how long are you going to have the lights out?"

Miss Griswold (conducting an English class reads from one of Whitman's poems)—"Hither my love, here am I, here."

Mr. Van Horn—"Entirely impossible, I assure you, Miss Griswold."

They play their piece fine. They strain the sweetness of their strain.

The Glee Club?

Gentlemen does it here? The what?

Dr. Lockwood's New Glasses?

Very unsophisticated. Miss Griswold getting a pair also?

Compulsory Chapel?

A cut one time soon makes nine. Why did the Puritans come to America?

The Book Store?

Worse than Tammany Hall ever was. Soon time for a spring suit, Jimmy.

The College Choir?

A-men. Why didn't Presx feel them knockout drops at that banquet? Need a timing fork.

The College Council?

What is it? Not gone but forgotten.

The Athletic Field?

At last. Have to be a K. K. G. to get in. All sorts of morality.

Cochran Hall?

Most of light and a nice dining room.
Hillings Hall Parlors—the spider's web. Place of detention for incurables.
The Quill Club?—Who said the pen was mightier than the sword? A haven for all of Frink L.'s proteges.
Power House?—Goes full speed on warm days.
Overflow Field?—A good playground for Saeger-town children.

To Become Popular?—Don't get a case.
Who Writes at Allegheny?—Quill Club aspirants.
Why?—Because Lockwood tells them they're phenomenal in their literary proclivities.
When?—All the time.
What?—Rot.
How?—Nobody knows.

The Dean's Below.

Prologue.
There is a room in Hillings Hall, whose situation is known to all. Second floor front, but more than that, it's right above Miss Spalding's flat.

Episode I.
A sound of feet
A bang at the door
A rush in great heat
Voices galore—

The Dean's Below.

Two Knights in Hillings Hall.

Now it so happened that on a certain day there fell unto two sturdy knights a wondrous adventure. And the way of that adventure was this. It was a time of strife, and all the fair campus was shrouded darkly in gloom and mist. And it came to pass that a chariot of glowing yellow paused before the gate and from it there descended a lady, and a steamer trunk. Now the lady was met by joyful friends and led to the Hall of Hillings, but the hapless trunk stood dripping on the curb and no man gave shelter to it. Then when the day was far spent there came riding a brave knight who fain would succor the distressed and lorn trunk, and lo, the name of the knight was Jimmy. He gazed upon the baggage where it lay and went straightway to seek aid. And he found other knight in the alleys of bowling, and he drew him aside from the motley throng and spake with him, and the name of that other knight was Mystery. So the dauntless two garbed themselves in glistening raiment impervious to rain, they drew down the brims of their helmets and fared forth upon the sacred quest. And they seized the ponderous trunk right manfully, and doughtily and resolutely they drew it toward the Hall. And, lo, it was a goodly sight to see. And they two bore the trunk unto the very portals (albeit the side portals) of the Hall itself, yea, unto the hallowed precincts of the second floor bore they that trunk. And the maiden to whom belonged the trunk was glad and rejoiced; she drew forth her silken purse, and lo, she would bestow upon the gallant warriors two hits. Then realized the knights that their garb was not the garb of the court, and with stern demeanor they withdrew for they were true knights and loved not lucre. And when they were come into the open air then they chortled right joyously and each turning to the other, dubbed him "Laughtron." And in this wise belled the adventure of Sir James and that other knight ye wot not of.

How True!
Old Delta Tau Delta man returns to college. He sees Fugate sitting on chair, legs crossed, smoking his piece of pipe and having known Vie's father asks:
"Say Fugate, what is your father doing now?"
Fugate—"My father? Oh, he's working my way through college."

New to Him.
Van Horn (eyeing his plate suspiciously)—"My what queer-looking veal. Does it all look like this?"
Pete (glibly)—"Mine looks as if it had been cut on the bias."
Van (innocently)—"The bias. What part of the cow is that?"
Hark ye to a tale veracious, how within a book capacious,
Eating naught but food herbaceous, dwelt a pre-historic gnome.
Though he lived there many ages, none has ever sought the pages
For the wisdom of the sages in this ancient person's home.
So in undisturbed possession of his literary home,
Dwelt the long-forgotten gnome.
He, in January's thawing, thought he heard a loud hurrahing
As of many folk guffawing rather near upon his home.
Then, his heart within him beating, saw the Kaldron Board in meeting,
Heard the Chief aloud repeating, "Ere the students leave for home,
We must have the fourth Book finished." "Holy Moses," gasped the gnome,
"Then I'm doomed to go to Rome."
But a fatal hesitation stopped his sudden consternation.
Wieler had an inspiration, rather pleased the little gnome,
Willy-nilly waved the white waste-basket, not quite equal to the task, it
Was too much for him to ask it, it descended on his dome.
"This is really quite exciting, think I'll stay," observed the gnome.

Lo, an inspiration's coming, see, Miss Thomas starts to humming,
Gaily her pencil drummering, whistles softly,
"Home, Sweet Home."
All the while Miss Lord is taking multitudes of notes, forsaking
All her work to aid the making of this all important tome.
Which you buy with trepidation, and with caution carry home.
To your happy distant home.
Like a shot from Etna's crater, Sidney sought the radiator,
Coming back with step sedater and a smile like Rubifoam.
Pro and Con McLean is pacing as with tempus he were racing.
"Wonder what he thinks he's chasing," sneered the peevish little gnome. "As with safety as his object up the chandelier he clomb. Whence lie watched the growing pome. Meanwhile Pierpont sits perusing something clever and amusing, philosophically musing till 'tis time to leave for home. Then our literary Florence, writing poetry in torrents, folding prose in stern abhorrence, with a touch as light as foam Always writing dainty verses (see Lit. Monthly). But the gnome Now began to wish for home. For the sight of all this service made the little gnome so nervous, With a muttered "Saints preserve us," he has sought a distant home. There he finds a restful quiet on a Battle Creekian diet Far from all this KALD RO N riot, with no thought or wish to roam, Lo, he dwells in peace securely, In a Roman catacomb.

Our College Council is not well, Some lingering fate hath him befell. What aileth him we cannot tell, But fear we lest they'll slit his knell.

Head in Holings
"Hello" (sweetly) "Is this Mr. A----? May I speak with Mr. ----, please?"

(Increasing sweetness of tone).
"Hello, is this Mr. A----? Oh, yes, this is Miss B----. How did you ever guess it?" (Giggling sentimentally). "Oh, Mr. ----. I'm so sorry to have to tell you—(much distressed)—but Miss Spalding simply demands it, I ----. What? Oh, no, indeed not that. I can go (vacillatingly) but (sobering) ----. What? (brightening) Oh, no, not that either. I'm sure I can go there, too. Well, it's just this. I'm so sorry—(voice trembling with emotion)—but Miss Spalding has just requested in the dining room that all orders for clothes from the frat houses should be cancelled at once, immediately. You understand, you're sure not to bring it—(anxiously)—yes, she insists—she's afraid it will cheapen the girls and they'll be criticized by the fellows; if they know arrangements have been made for getting clothes from the houses. You understand don't you, how it is (apologetically), and you'll explain to the fellows that all orders are being cancelled won't you?" (Definitely). "That you just as much, and I'm sorry, for I'd just love to have it. It's perfectly lovely of you and thank you so much for being so good about it. Yes, indeed. Thank you again as much. (Good-bye.)" (Harshly in subdued tones) "Oh, Mr. A----, be sure and bring it just the same."

Blow.
Dr. Benjamin (telling about the slow Germans)—"Why there is a town over there that has only had two changes in its entire history, one when they became Christians and the other when they became protestants. Why over there they haven't even changed their clothes—that is I mean the style of them."

Never Thought It.
Dr. Benjamin (calling on Jimmy Miller to report on the criminal)—"Mr. Miller will now give us a report on the criminal. Part of this will be from his personal experience——"

A certain Freshman, receiving bids to two sorority parties, writes acceptances to both and carries them to Holings Hall where he hands them to the maid.
Slips of the Tongue.

A Halogen girl, becoming excited over a coming basketball game: Oh, I'm sure we'll get beaten; you know the team that's coming here bit Pete last night: Oh dear, oh dear!

Dr. Lockwood, becoming enraged in English Class: "Why, Mr. ------, that would be as outrageous as tying a tin tail to a dog's can."

Dr. Benjamin, seeing Miss Thomas about to board a train for home: "Oh, Miss Thomas, you're going to leave us, are you? Remember me to all my friends at your home. You know, I have a soft heart in my spot for Silver Creek."

Miss Spalding, saying grace: "We thank thee for all thy mercies and blessings."

A Senior girl, advancing with appropriate dignity to the window of the Paying Teller in the Savings Bank: I should like to have this check cashed, please.

Three "Sol" Taylorettes.

Prof. Dewey and Sol walking from Cochran to Bentley meet Parmenter coming from library. Prof. Dewey—"Say, man, I'm coming over to see your forum some day."

"Sol"—(eyeing Parmenter from head to foot)—"Say, Prof., he does have some form, doesn't he?"

"Tom" Fitzgerald—"Say, Sol, what would you do if you were Andy Carnegie's son?"

"Sol" (uncertainly)—"Well, I wouldn't do nothing."

A Senior girl, advancing with appropriate dignity to the window of the Paying Teller in the Savings Bank: I should like to have this check cashed, please.

Poetry's Pup

Poor Prexy has his troubles,
With his steam pipes and his heat,
With how much the boys at Cochran
Either shall or shall not eat.
With the lads who ply the scissors
Or at night assail the Hall,
With the getting of endowment
And of students for next fall.

But of all the trials and worries
With which Prexie must put up
Sure the highest and the hardest
Is the care of that bull-pup.

You may see Prex in the morning,
You may see him at high noon,
You may see him in the twilight
Or beneath the smiling moon.

You may see him in his door-yard,
Up by Bentley, near the gym.
Over on the rustic bridge-way,
Midst the bushes wild and dim:
You may see him when it's pleasant,
When it rains and when it snows.
When the air is warm and spring-like.
When the chilling North-wind blows.

Calling, "Bunny, Bunny, Bunny,"—
Do not think he's searching game,
He is looking for a doggie,
Who should answer to that name:
Sure we'll need another Prexy
Ere the present year is up
If some fate does not relieve him
Of the care of that bull pup.

The Wedding March

What do I see coming through the drive?
Why it's a wedding procession as I'm alive.
A grocer's cart and forty young men,
Escorting Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin.
Up over the walk they go pell-mell
Up on three wheels; oh, what a yell,
Benjy clings to the seat, she to G. B.
As they make a quick turn and just miss a tree.
In front of the chapel they come to a rest,
And Giddings made a speech by request;
He stammered a while and said, "Young men,
I'll give you my word not to do it again."

After chapel was over he then went to class
But was forced to sit down till the procession had passed;
Pots and pans, kettles and covers,
Were showered on the unfortunate lovers.

Faculty Limericks

Prof. Muffly, der Herr of our College
Is crammed with an ocean of knowledge
The studes all agree
A philosopher's he,
This grand old Deutsch Prof. of our college.

There is a young German Professor
A very fastidious dresser;
The students all swear
That Dewey's "all there,"
And in short he's a favorite Professor.

A teacher they call Fank C. Lockwood
The least impropriety shock would
So proper and prim
Is this man tall and slim
He regulates himself as a clock would.

Our able athletic Doc Lee
From sarcasm never is free
Sometimes he is witty
But this is the pity—
He never attends Senior Tea.

A mighty fine prof. is our Decker,
Who of rocks is a merciless pecker;
With his camera and can
And a following van,
He is seen on his course—a rock-wrecker.

A Biblical man is this Bieler,
Whose words none could ever find milder
When with logic we fought,
Consolation was brought,
By the "possibly so" uttered by Bieler.

There lived a Greek doctor called Bill
Whose spirit pervaded the hill
With all his knowledge,
He appalled the whole college
And ever did wisdom distill.

Teaches us math.
Without shadow of wrath,
But he shows his dislike of late wakers.

Cute!
Jimmy Miller (distributing mail during Christmas vacation).
Maid (answering the door), "Oh," with delighted condescension, "So, we've a new post boy, have we?"
Jimmy, humbly, "Yes, mum."
Maid, sweetly, "Aren't you quite small, honey, to be carrying that big bag?"

For Life!
Professor Snively (conversing with Senior girl)—"I expect this time next year you'll be teaching young blood how to shoot."
Senior Girl—"No, I'm not going to be on the firing line."
Professor Snively, in surprise—"Indeed, where are you going to be?"
Senior Girl, demurely—"In the Commissary Department."

Miss Foster and Miss Askey discussing the Washington Birthday Banquet speeches:
Miss Foster—"Of course, the speeches were all fine but I thought Mr. Wadler's was especially so: it was so clever and ——"
Miss Askey, (interrupting eagerly)—"Yes, indeed: in fact it was the only one with any real point to it."

Fight! Fight!
Sophomore, running up to new Freshman breathlessly, "Awful fight in Alden Hall a minute ago. You should have seen it."
Freshman, with visions of another poster scrap, "What was it? Was anybody hurt? Tell me all about it."
Sophomore, with look of disdain, "Now, nobody hurt much. Van Slyke just knocked the stuffing out of Pillow and a little later they found a Tear on the Sheets."

Scandal!
Burrwell (in biology lab.)—"What are you working on Miss Girsham?"
Miss Girsham—"I'm on a bat."
"Red" Edmonds—"The alarm clock went off."
Galbraith, drowsily—"I don't care. I hope it never comes back."

Correct!
Prof. Swartley (very enthusiastically)—"This line in Chunner is incorrect, for have we any proof of the existence of orchestras in biblical times?"
"Sol" Taylor—"Oh, yes sir. Don't you remember that place where it says that Moses led the band of Israelites?"

Did Dr. B. Say Something Like This?

After much hesitation and long contemplation, I have reached the formation of a strong determination to make an explanation and ask you, after due deliberation, to stand up before a congregation and become my relation. I have a good education, come from high station, and follow an honest occupation. I will secure a suitable habitation in some good location, with enough ventilation and sufficient illumination. My love is not imagination nor an hallucination but an infatuation of long duration. I trust the presentation of this communication will not cause consternation, that the proclamation will receive your consideration and meet with your approbation, and that confirmation may cross my expectation.

So Sang Gilbert.

Last night I held a little hand,
So dainty and so neat,
Methought my heart would burst with joy,
So wildly did it beat;
No other hand into my soul
Could greater solace bring
Than that I held last night, which was—
Three aces and a king.

Phi Psi Robby.

Rob tried so hard to raise a beard
He couldn't sleep at night,
And sometimes 'er the morn appeared
He'd dream they had grown right.
No longer does the razor grace
That once our shopper did break,
For after a long and patient wait
We've learned of our mistake.
Little Robby, then, had a brush
Of which he rubbed his hand
For he expected in the hush
Of night none would understand.
At last the villain is discovered,
His wickedness made known.
For the torture we have suffered
He'll in the tub be thrown.

The Worm Turns.

Dr. Lockwood (on registration day), looking at Freshman Mark's certificate in English.

"Well, sir, where is your home?"
Mark—"In Scotland, professor."
Dr. Lockwood (haughtily)—"And where is Scotland, sir?"
Mark (with the dignity of a Senior)—"In the British Isles, I believe, professor."
