Dear Miss Tarbell:

In reply to your note of November 8 let me say that I am now scrutinizing chapter iv. I think I shall retain this, and chapters v, vi and ix, in my possession and send the rest on to you sometime later in the week. The reason I am hanging onto chapter ix ("Nationalizing the Railroads") is because of the possible desirability of having it follow "The Industrial Trust." I want to find out how the two chapters go when they are read consecutively.

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

A. M. Schlesinger
