New York City

My dear Miss Tarbell:

Although I am no longer connected with the Harvard Business School, I have made inquiries in regard to the point raised in your letter to me of November 10th. I find that the group of business executives who voted that Owen D. Young was "The greatest business man in America" was the group of students who were attending the summer session of the school in 1929. So far as I can learn, however, no reasons were given for this choice.

Very sincerely yours,

Edwin F. Gay
