Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
c/o The American Magazine,
250 Park Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Miss Tarbell:

Your article in the American Magazine for February 1932 entitled "What Big Business Expects of Young Men" has impressed us here very much. So much indeed that we would like to make a reprint of it for use in connection with our publicity. We would, of course, give full credit to you and the American Magazine for the article.

We wrote to the American Magazine asking for permission to use the article under the above conditions and they referred us to you as shown by the inclosed copy of their letter.

We would appreciate it very much if you would grant us the courtesy of allowing us to make the reprint as we desire.

Incidentally it is a very heartening thing to us to know that a person of your wide experience and great ability, feels the way you seem to feel about a liberal education.

With renewed thanks for any courtesies you may extend us in connection with the article, I am

Very truly yours,

John Bailey Kelly
