My dear Miss Tarbell:

In February of 1932, The American Magazine published an article entitled "What Big Business Expects of Young Men", of which you were the author.

We have recently written to the American Magazine for permission to re-print this article in the College Bound Magazine. They have kindly given their consent, subject only to your approval.

The College Bound Club of America is a non-profit membership corporation, organized by the presidents and friends of several of the leading colleges of Ohio and elsewhere, for the purpose of building up a greater interest in college in the minds of the coming generation. We plan to publish a modest magazine, entitled "The College Bound Magazine", from time to time for the purpose of distributing it gratis to those parents and children who join this Club. The article referred to has impressed us as one which would be extremely useful in creating the ideas and ideals which we are striving to inculcate, and we would consider it a very great service to the youth of this section and to us who are leading this movement, if you would permit us to reprint the article. We will, of course, give full credit to you and to The American Magazine.

Trusting you may find it possible to grant this request.

Yours sincerely,

G. E. Lundy
Executive Secretary
