

February 13, 1932

Dear Mr. Case:

I wonder if you will be good enough to advise me about the enclosed? I was rather hoping to see Mr. Young myself this week and I was going to present then Mrs. Judd's letter. Now I take ~~you will~~ if you will have the chance to get it to him more quickly than I can.

It seemed to me that this is an occasion in which Mr. Young might be interested. It is really something that touches the heart - this fine simple old man who for eighty years has been going about interpreting the best of things in a fine way. He and Mrs. Markham have always had a dream of visiting England and they have never had the money. It might be a good thing for everybody to remember them.

But I know how beset Mr. Young is and I am only passing this on because of the pressure put upon me to do so, because I sympathize with the undertaking and because I am sure there is something with which Mr. Young will sympathize even if he cannot lend his name to the program.

I shall send you down Monday the first draft of the book. I hope you will have a chance to go through it before I see you at Mr. Crocker's lunch on Friday.

Looking forward to seeing you and Josephine one of these days when we are all a little more at leisure.

Faithfully yours

Mr. Everett Case
120 Broadway
New York City

Digital Images, 2011. The Ida M. Tarbell Collection, 1890-1944, Allegheny College Pelletier Library.