

October 14, 1931

Dear Miss Chandler:

Do you see any objection to the editor of the American Magazine saying in a footnote to a reference I am making in one of his articles on "The Owen D. Young Fundamental Library of English Literature" something like this -

"We regret that we have not the space to name these two hundred books but the Editor has Mr. Young's permission to send the list to any reader who will apply for it to the American Magazine."

I should of course see to it that the list was neatly printed, though I have no hopes of their doing any such piece of work as was done for Dr. Galne's address with the catalogue.

If you will assure me that it will be all right* to go ahead with this suggestion I shall be greatly obliged.

Very sincerely yours

 or all wrong!*

Miss Gertrude Chandler
120 Broadway
New York City