Dear Miss Christie:

Thank you for your note. I do hope that Dr. Whitney is not ill. Only a wise man taking a rest when he needs it.

As to the interview. Unfortunately I am pressed for time. I cannot myself see anything in the talk that he would object to, but you know his mind better than I do - know whether at any point what I have said would be counted an indiscretion by him. Would it be possible for me to go ahead with the interview as it stands? The book will hardly be in pages by the Sixth of March when you say Dr. Whitney will be here, although it will be in galleys I hope. What do you think of my going ahead with the understand that if Dr. Whitney wants corrections I will make them? I shall be very glad of your advice in this matter.

I, too, remember with pleasure the few minutes we had together. I hope someday we may have more of them.

Very sincerely yours

Miss Mary Christie
