It looks at this moment as if that old clause of the covenant, of the League of Nations, over which we split twelve years ago with the rest of the world, was coming out of the fog. The Times editorial on France and Disarmament of this morning, July 25th. (quote from Memo.)

Here is the text of the thing -

Neutrality is inconsistent with inter-dependence which binds States more and more closely together. You can't have your cake and eat it too as we ~~have~~ have been trying to do. It looks to me as if we were not only going to put peace into the sentimental Kellogg treaty but that we were going at last to climb in<sup>to</sup> the League of Nations.
