

1931-05-12

Article: Young Building Van Hornesville, May 12, 1931

Unknown

<http://hdl.handle.net/10456/39191>

The copyright owner of this item is unknown. It is the responsibility of the researcher to identify and satisfy the holders of all copyrights.

All materials in the Allegheny College DSpace Repository are subject to college policies and Title 17 of the U.S. Code.

"All this city life," he says, "even business, shrinks to smaller proportions when I get back to the farm for a while. I suppose it might be counted an example of dual personality, but I do not see it that way. I have never been pried loose from the land nor shaken myself from the pull that drives a man back to his home acres. I still keep the place. I always shall; and when I get up there and get into overalls and wrestle with the same task I used to have to do as a boy, I'm about as happy as I know how to be. The quiet and the bodily toil of the farmer are the best restoratives I know for perspectives."