Dear Sir,

I was sorry to hear of the sad occurrence of which I am, I believe, one of the last to bear witness. In the few words you give of its circumstances, you have done it credit; and I feel sure such a detail will be read with interest by many who are, as you say, not only inclined, but in duty bound, to study the facts of the case. As I have been informed, the young man was a naturalized American, and had been educated in this country. He was a man of good character, and had been employed in a respectable business. He was a man of refinement, and had an education beyond the common. He was a man of strength, and had a body that was well proportioned. He was a man of spirit, and had a mind that was quick and active. He was a man of generosity, and had a heart that was warm and kind. He was a man of probity, and had a conscience that was pure and true. He was a man of integrity, and had a character that was upright and blameless. He was a man of taste, and had a mind that was refined and cultivated. He was a man of refinement, and had a body that was well proportioned. He was a man of strength, and had a mind that was quick and active. He was a man of spirit, and had a heart that was warm and kind. He was a man of generosity, and had a conscience that was pure and true. He was a man of integrity, and had a character that was upright and blameless. He was a man of taste, and had a mind that was refined and cultivated. He had been a man of refinement, and had a body that was well proportioned.
