Office of the President

June 29, 1929.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
120 East 19th Street,
New York City.

My dear Miss Tarbell:

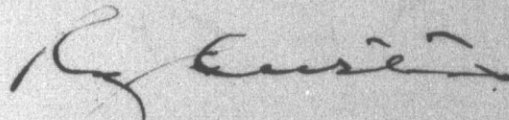

We are happy to advise you that the many requests to date for the address you delivered at our inaugural dinner make it necessary for us to have your speech put into booklet form. In view of this, we feel that you may desire to make some changes and edit the copy before the same has been printed. Therefore, we await receiving your manuscript of the statement you want printed.

We should like to have you include in this paper a statement of your idea of what constitutes Lincoln-Mindedness. We should also like to have you make a picture of how the young men and women may be expected to conduct themselves after having been in association for a period of six years with a Lincoln-minded faculty and a minimum of fifteen hundred Lincoln-minded young men and women from all parts of the world.

Again thanking you for your cooperation, I am

Yours most cordially,

RC/a
