Woman's Home Companion:

A possible useful article could be made I think for the "American" on the proposal to put some form of religion into the schools. Owen Young is on the committee. See clipping attached. The difficulty, of course, is that you get rival systems of religion. What is wanted, so it seems to me, is a scheme of education in Christian ethics, something to which Catholic, Jew and Protestant - all forms of well intentioned men would subscribe. It needs practical simple principles, something like Mr. Kipling's copybook maxims, in which the dangers of predatory competition, cooperation, freedom of opinion, control of tongue, etc., etc., would be enlarged upon and the evils which result from not following them. Certainly an interview with Mr. Young.
