

Cleaning Up:

Empty spools were saved. We strung them in groups of fifteen or twenty. A grand thing for children to play with. Sometimes we decorated them and they came in handy, as father used to say, sometimes using them - I do not know for what - to whittle out a little piece he wanted. They had to save them. It was part of the code for nothing to go to waste.

Spent thinking
I just don't