THOMPSON

Allegheny Student Government gathered for its regular general assembly meeting, while also welcoming Dean of Students, April Thompson as a guest speaker and discussing how to better communicate with students.

ASG returned to its discussion about Talk About It Tuesday and decided to hold Talk About It Tuesday every few weeks with different themes. Talking about communication and its importance, ASG members talked about the organization's role in student-led initiatives after last week's protests.

"Half of representation is just showing up," said Camila Gomez, '19, ASG president. "It's telling you're upset and telling us about it in Talk About It Tuesday ... ASG is supposed to be a channel, not a source."

Jason Ferrante, '20, said students need to come to general assembly meetings and talk to members of ASG in order for ASG to be more involved and readily available to students, saying students need to meet ASG halfway.

"If you want something done in the U.S. Senate you write to your senators, you attend town hall meetings," Ferrante said. "We can try, but we also need to hear something back."

Thompson attended the meeting to talk about wanting students to be more involved in what comes next — a series of the protests — and how to become "inclusive of many student voices."

"We are hoping to have some changes for you as soon as possible, because I know there are some students that are looking for some new policy changes," Thompson said. "So if you have ideas and suggestions of ways we can improve, fun things that we can do, I'm hopefully going to get more opportunities to be the dean of fun in the weeks ahead."

ASG also went through weekly cabinet and class reports. Cabinet reports included scheduling times to work on the ASG float for the upcoming Meadville Halloween parade, getting service hours and discussing applications for the College Committees Council.

Environmental Affairs Committee led by Cat Lord, '20, brought into consideration a few changes coming for the green to-go boxes at McKinley's Dining Hall.

"We're working on a keychain for the tokens that students use for the box machine, because people keep losing them," Lord said.

Class of 2022 Vice President Kathryn Philippe brought up the possibility of sustainable, reusable cups like the to-go boxes in places like Smoothie Street.

"They do have a sign up in the smoothie station that says they can't accept reusable cups, for health and safety reasons," Ferrante said. "I don't know what they are exactly, but it's the same reasons you can't bring your own plates to Kinz."

PEREIRA

Luiz Heleno Pereira, 53, was found guilty on two counts related to his having sexual contact with an 11-year-old boy, court records show. Pereira was Allegheny College's associate director of admissions and coordinator of international recruitment until his Jan. 24, 2018, arrest.

A jury impaneled Sept. 19 found Pereira guilty of unlawful contact with a minor, a third-degree felony, and corruption of minors, a first-degree misdemeanor, on Sept. 20.

Pereira was found not guilty on two other charges — indecent assault of a person under 13 years of age, a first-degree misdemeanor, and harassment by subjecting another to physical contact, a summary offense.

See Commonwealth of Pennsylvania amended its charges against Pereira on Sept. 12. The motion, which was granted by Crawford County of Common Pleas President Judge Anthony Vardaro on Sept. 13, added the charge of corruption of minors.

Pereira faces up to 12 years in prison and a $25,000 fine. He is scheduled to be sentenced Friday, Nov. 2.

Ball visits campus to talk climate change, renewable energy

BALL

Jeffrey Ball, Woodrow Wilson Visiting Fellow and scholar-in-residence at Stanford University's Steyer-Taylor Center for Energy and Finance, delivered a talk at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 25, in the Tillotson Room of the Patricia Bush Tippie Alumni Center.

Ball discussed the challenges of renewable energy policy, and his work as a reporter writing on renewable energy issues. He said while he was not a trained scientist, he felt his work as a reporter made it possible to explain scientific concepts in a valuable and relatable way.

"I don't mean you have a narrow perspective, I just mean that I have a different perspective than you do," Ball said.

Ball started writing about energy policy because he was interested in exploring complicated, consequential issues.

"This is maybe the mother of all mega issues, and if you want to make a difference in the world, you should dig into this, and if you don't care too much about making a difference in the world, and just want to make a lot of money, you should dig into this," Ball said.

Ball's talk centered around the dangers of climate change and the challenges of managing the twin forces of environmental progress and economic incentives.

"Because I think history suggests that when environmental progress and the profit motive are in conflict, the progress doesn't happen," Ball said.

While there were many questions surrounding the potential uses of renewable energy in daily life, Ball did not think there were many clear answers to climate change.
