103d ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Program Marking Graduation of Allegheny's Second War Class Closes Today—Many Features of Unusual Interest.

The programme began on Saturday with the annual class exercise, which was followed in the evening with a brilliant song concert by Christine Miller, and on Sunday morning by the annual Baccalaureate sermon, preached in the First M. E. Church by President Crawford before one of the greatest audiences ever gathered in a Meadville church and which was marked by a spirit of patriotism on the part of both preacher and audience such as only the mighty events of the day could stir in any community.

Class Day Exercises.

The Class Day exercises were held on the college campus at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The first four speakers spoke from the rustic bridge to a large crowd gathered on the hillside. Mr. H. L. Wissinger, president of the graduating class, mentioned the fact that the outgoing class has dwindled to its present enrollment of 50 members largely through the enlistment of men in the service of the Nation. After a brief tribute to President Crawford, he introduced the speakers of the afternoon.

Miss Esther Emery, the salutatorian, gave the welcome of the senior class to the visiting friends, parents and alumni. P. W. Stearns, the class historian, read a history of the class featured by escapades, banquets and the usual college affairs, and chronicling the enlistment of a large number of the men of the college at the outbreak of the war.

Miss Olive Dowdell, the class prophetess, took her hearers on an imaginary trip to Europe 20 years hence, and pictured the probable occupations of the graduating students at that time. Miss English, the valedictorian of the class, very aptly expressed the feeling of the seniors upon leaving school. Following this speeches of farewell were made to the various buildings; Miss McConnell to the College Chapel, Mr. Kelly to the Library, and Mr. Brown to Hulings Hall.

The Christine Miller Concert.

The feature of the evening was a concert for which the college was fortunate in being able to procure Christine Miller Clemson. Especial interest attaches to her career as she is a native of Western Pennsylvania, having sung in the Third Presbyterian Church at Pittsburgh for a number of years. On her return from studying abroad, she rapidly gained popularity, until she is today among the first rank of American concert singers. The programme which she rendered to a crowded chapel was varied, including a number of entirely different types of songs. Of special interest is the section of the programme in which she sang the French songs, "La Bas" and "Carnaval," the former a tale of the dreams of those who were under German rule in Alsace Lorraine, the latter, a light sketch of the spirit of a French village carnival. Among her other numbers should be mentioned "How's My Boy?" in which she showed wonderful ability to portray the stronger emotions, and "At Dawning," a love song which she sang with great feeling. At the close of the programme song. Of especial interest is the second she led the entire audience in a short "Community Sing," singing such songs as "Over There," "There a Long, Long Trail," and other favorites of the boys in camp. The programme as given follows:

1. The Desert Shall Rejoice and Blossom as the Rose. Allegheny College Glee Clubs, conducted by Harry D. Connor.
2. The Year's at the Spring. Mr. Beach Bendemeer's Stream. Old Irish Melody Cuddle Doon. Sidney Howe O. Red Is the English Rose. Forsyth When the Boys Come Home. John Haig Christine Miller Clemson.
3. Voices of the Woods. Rubinstein-Spicer Dixie Land. Patriotic Song Girls' Glee Club.
4. La-Bas. Fourdrain Carnival. Fourdrain La Marselleise. French National Song Christine Miller Clemson.
5. The Gypsy Trail. Kipling-Galloway The Cavalry Song. Brackett Men's Glee Club.
6. How's My Boy? Sidney Homer Indian Serenade. Lianrance At Dawning. Cadmau Khaki Sammy. John A. Carpenter Christine Miller Clemson.

Baccalaureate Sermon a Wonderful Message

DR. CRAWFORD MOVES GREAT AUDIENCE IN HIS 25TH ANNUAL SERMON. INTENSELY PATHOTIC ADDRESS TO CLASS OF 1918.

In all the 25 years that Dr. William H. Crawford has been president of Allegheny College, he has never faced a more intensely interested, sympathetic and expectant audience than that which greeted him at the First M. E. Church on Sunday morning when he preached the baccalaureate sermon for the 103d annual commencement of the old college and the 25th in his administration as president of the institution. The church was packed to the doors and beyond, and in all its features the great meeting was an event in the history of the college that can never be forgotten by those who were present.

The decorations were patriotic very largely, though flowers were used in profusion, and while there was in all the beautiful service the marked dignity that belongs to such an event, the feeling patriotism that twined about the thought that the man who was speaking was fresh from Y. M. C. A. service in France and that his heart was so full of thoughts of what he had seen and learned there that it was fairly overflowing, at once brought speaker and audience into closest harmony of word and thought and made the service at once as intensely patriotic as it was religious.

It was a most remarkable sermon. It fitted the time and circumstance, in that it dealt fearlessly with the great issues of the times and at the same time sustained the dignity of the commencement requirement. Dr. Crawford, it seemed, never before spoke with such intense earnestness, and his audience responded with a degree of attention that was at times a mighty strain on the nerves of many and which often brought tears from men and women all over the house.

Dr. Crawford and the members of the faculty and the Senior Class appeared in the regulation academic cap and gown and Dr. Crawford took as his text a part of the 14th verse of the 6th Chapter of Ephesians—"And having on the breastplate of righteousness," and preached on the Righteousness a Source of National Strength," applying it to the present war. He told of visiting the ruins of Verdun shortly before leaving France, and seeing there a breastplate of solid steel 3-8 of an inch thick which had been pierced by a French bullet. He used this to show that in modern times no mere material protection can protect us from material harm. In the text Paul meant not a breastplate for the body, but a breastplate for the whole moral nature of man.

It has been understood that the man who is right, who is just, who is known in the community to be an honest man, is powerful because of his righteousness.

But we have not understood that the same standard and the same reputation is as much a protection for nations. Instead they have taken it for granted that expediency know no law. Centrally located in the heart of this problem is this question—whether nations will learn that righteousness of the nation is just as important as righteousness for the individual.

Some say that the war has come because the United States has not kept its ideals; that since the development of science and industry man has become physically a giant without his moral and spiritual nature keeping pace. I do not believe in this doctrine. The past twelve months have shown that there never has been a nation which responded to the call of righteousness in such a way.

Others say that it is but a punishment for our acts; that God brought on the war to punish these. I do not believe that. Some maintain that it is but a fulfillment of a prophecy in Revelations of Daniel. I do not believe in all these theories. I hold rather that America responded to a great moral call. Balfour, on the occasion of the anniversary of our entrance into the war, said "America has entered this war because of the moral issues involved. There is not in this world room enough for the ideas and ideals represented by the Central Powers and the ideas and ideals represented by the allied powers in this war." We must be very careful to know first that we are conducting this war on the principles of righteousness, and second that the principle for which we are fighting is right.

After I had questioned hundreds of soldiers fresh from the trenches at Aix-la-bas, I got many interesting answers to the question, "What do you men in the trenches feel that you are fighting for?" Of all of them I was proud, but of one especially, when a young soldier answered me, "Well, Dr. Crawford, I feel that I am fighting to help make this world a fit place to live in."

Dr. Crawford then briefly traced the history of the German Government from the early rise of the Hohenzollern family to the rise of Prussia under Frederick the Great. He then showed how William the Second and his chancellor Bismarck had built up

Important Meeting of Board of Trustees

CHAIR OF GERMAN ABOLISHED AT ALLEGHENY. STUDENTS TO BE GRADUATED IN THREE YEARS AS WAR MEASURE.

The study of German in Allegheny College was formally and emphatically ended on Saturday by the Board of Trustees at their annual meeting by the adoption of a resolution abolishing the chair of German. This action entirely eliminates German as a study in Allegheny College, the head of which department for some years past has been Dr. George A. Mulfinger.

The Trustees met with Arthur L. Thompson of Baltimore, President of the Board, in the chair. Captain Wesley B. Best was called to act as secretary and the first business was the hearing of the annual reports of the President of the College, Dr. W. H. Crawford and of the Treasurer, Rev. Joseph W. Miles, and of the Investment Committee. All these reports were very satisfactory, indicating the number of students was really large.

Dr. Chas. E. Hammet, physical director of the college was granted a leave of absence for one year or during the war that he may go to France to instruct our soldiers there in athletics.

President William H. Crawford

letics. He will leave soon after commencement.

The usual degrees were ordered to be conferred at graduation on the members of the Senior Class and the degree of LL. D. on former President William Howard Taft, who is to be the guest of honor of the college for commencement as the accredited representative of Yale University.

Frank P. Miller, of Meadville, was elected a member of the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Joseph W. Miles was appointed as committee to draft appropriate resolutions on the death of the late Dr. Noble G. Miller, of Appolo, a member of the Board, and Captain Wesley B. Best was named for a like duty in memory of the late James P. Colter, of Meadville, for many years the faithful and efficient secretary of the Board, both to forward copies to the families.

A resolution was adopted providing that during the period of the war, students of the college be permitted to graduate who shall have taken a full three years' course of study and, in the meantime, two Summer terms such as are provided in the college.

It was at this point in the proceedings that the resolution for abolishing the chair of German in the college was presented and adopted, after which the following officers of the board were elected for the ensuing year:

- President, Arthur W. Thompson.
President emeritus, Hon. F. A. Arter.
Vice-president, Judge John J. Henderson.
Secretary, Paul Sturtevant.
Treasurer, Rev. Joseph W. Miles.
Executive Committee—President W. H. Crawford, Hon. John J. Henderson, Captain Wesley B. Best, Hon. A. L. Bates and Frank P. Miller.
Investment Committee—Harvey Henderson, G. B. Chase, Paul Sturtevant.
Investment Trustee—The Colonial Trust Company of Pittsburgh.
Librarian—Miss Edith Rowley.
Robert O. Conant was elected instructor in history and romance.
Florence M. Steward was elected instructor in English.
Carl A. Gilbert was elected instructor in romance.
The Executive Committee was given authority to fill all vacancies.

CLASS OF 1918 FORMALLY CLOSES CAREER AT ALLEGHENY. ADDRESS DELIVERED BY REV. RICHARD PINCH BOWLES, D. D., LL. D.

As the Campus went to press the Commencement Exercises of this year's graduating class were being held in the Ford Memorial Chapel this morning. Allegheny's second War Class, numbering fifty-one members were presented with diplomas and had the Bachelor Degrees conferred upon them by President Crawford. Members of this year's class may indeed feel a sense of pride in being the class to round out President Crawford's twenty-fifth year of service as President of Allegheny College.

The Commencement address, "Work of Canadian Colleges in the World War," was delivered by Rev. Richard Binch Bowles, D. D., LL. D., Chancellor and President of Victoria University, Toronto, Canada.

PRESIDENT CRAWFORD ENDS 25th YEAR OF SERVICE

Allegheny Honors Her President in Anniversary Celebration—Crawford Chimes Presented.

Noted Speakers Present.

One of the most distinguished gatherings which has met in Meadville for many years was present Monday morning in Ford Memorial chapel to pay honor to President William H. Crawford in recognition of the completion of 25 years of constructive and faithful service as president of Allegheny College. Special representatives were delegated to represent several of the leading colleges and universities of the United States, as well as representatives of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, of the trustees, and of the alumni of the college.

Dr. Camden M. Coburn, acting president of the college during the past six months, called the meeting to order and opened with a short speech expressing in elaborate terms the friendship and love as well as the honor which the faculty of the college feel for Dr. Crawford. He said that in all the history of the college the two principal events have been the coming of Timothy Alden, the founder of the old Allegheny, and Dr. Crawford, the founder of the new Allegheny.

Dr. Coburn then introduced Dr. Abram W. Harris, Sc. D., LL. D., who made an eloquent address of congratulation.

Greetings were made by Dean Charles H. Haskins, President Charles M. Stuart, Garrett Biblical Institute, Chancellor McCormick, University of Pittsburgh, Hon. J. J. Henderson, Arthur W. Thompson and others, while the presentation of the Crawford Chimes was made by Paul Sturtevant, '99, and Andrew A. Culbertson, '01.

President Crawford's response was given close attention and he ended by giving praise for the good which he may have done to Mrs. Crawford. Mr. Taft spoke briefly on the 25th anniversary of Dr. Crawford's presidency of the school, and with the benediction by the Reverend John Abner Marquis this feature of the programme came to a close.

Ex-President Taft Presents Address

ALLEGHENY CONFERS DEGREE OF DOCTOR OF LAWS UPON WILLIAM H. TAFT, OF YALE UNIVERSITY. GREAT ADDRESS.

Going from the Stone Church meeting directly to the already packed Ford Memorial Chapel Monday afternoon, Hon. William Howard Taft, former President of the United States, was made the recipient of the degree of Doctor of Laws, conferred upon him by Allegheny College. President W. H. Crawford conferred the degree and Mr. Taft responded graciously to the honor.

Mr. Taft's address of the afternoon was the address so much quoted, upon the "Legal and Moral Aspects of the War." Mr. Taft's introduction gives in a few words the nature of the address.

"Long ago, before I was exposed to the vicious and demoralizing contact with politics, I was a lawyer, trained to arrange facts in logical order, to state cases, and to draw from them conclusions before impartial tribunals. It will be of use to us now to go through just such a reasoning process with regard to the underlying principles of this war. My purpose this afternoon is to set before you so far as lies within my power a logical statement of the case of the United States of America and the world against Germany."

As implied in the introduction, the address was a scholarly and logical development of America's case, with every statement supported and every point well clinched. His words were the more significant on account of his position as head of the League to Enforce Peace, and on account of his world-wide reputation as an authority on international law.

Our Neutral Rights.

Mr. Taft began with the position of the United States during our neutrality in the world war, and showed that there was no inconsistency in our position, and nothing that was not in accord with the accepted principles of international law. He exposed the statements of the Germans that America was to blame for the sinking of the Sussex since she knew the risk she was taking. He compared it to a case in which Jones threatened Smith's life if he came into the street. When Smith came into the street Jones shot him. But no court would hold that Smith was guilty of contributory negligence or suicide because he knew the risk before going into the street, where he had a perfect right to be. He showed clearly that our selling of munitions to the Allies was in accord with international law.

Mr. Taft traced the diplomatic steps and the incidents which led to our entrance into the war up to the time when diplomatic relations had been severed, and we "sent back to the Kaiser's bosom that polished gentleman, clever liar and dirty diplomat, Count Johann Von Bernstorff, whereupon the Kaiser kissed him on both cheeks, and sent him off to be at home among the Turks."

Taking up the possibilities of different actions which the United States might have taken, he showed by legal arguments that we could have taken no other course than that which we did take. And here the speaker stopped to remark that in his own opinion it was disgraceful that a Senator in the Congress of the United States should say that the right of the women and children on board the Lusitania had only a technical right to live, and one which might be waived.

Goes Into Details.

The speaker reviewed positive evidence from authentic sources proving the holding of a council of war by German and Austrian officials to decide upon sending a cut-and-dried ultimatum to Serbia, making it appear that the ultimatum was the work of Austria alone.

He reviewed the history of the German Government, and showed that those Germans who emigrated to America were of the freedom-loving revolutionary type while in the old country, and expressed his opinion that the great majority of them are loyal to the United States. In this connection he said: "Don't let lawlessness creep into our punishment of the rest, who may utter really disloyal or treasonous sentiments. The law has ample means to take care of them. Since we are charging them with gross lawlessness and brutality, let us look into our breasts and see that we do not use any of that same lawlessness in their punishment. We can't afford to Germanize ourselves in order to get even with these Germans. We must keep our escutcheon clean."

Mr. Taft closed his speech with these impressive words: "This Western drive has demonstrated that in spite of all the elaborate inventions of war, this war must be won by manpower. And we must prepare, whether it takes a year, or two years, or three years. We must accept any sacrifice, no matter how great, in preference to the awful future which will face us if William of Hohenzollern and his Potsdam gang are to control the destiny of the world."

Following this, one of the most distinguished addresses Meadville has had the privilege of hearing for a long time, a beautiful organ recital was rendered on the chapel organ, together with the new $5000 alumni chimes, by Dr. William C. Carl, director of the Guilman Organ School in New York City. It was enjoyed by a very large audience.

BENEFIT CONCERT SUCCESS.

Girl's Glee Club Concert Proved Most Enjoyable. Red Cross and Belgian Relief Societies Aided.

Thursday evening, April 25th, the Girl's Glee Club gave a benefit concert for the Red Cross and the Belgian Relief Society, which proved to be a great success and fully met the purpose for which it was presented. The concert was a patriotic move on the part of the Girl's Glee Club to assist the above mentioned worthy causes, and it is announced that a very satisfactory sum was raised. All expenses of the concert were met by the Girl's Club itself, every cent of the ticket sale and door receipts going to the Red Cross and Belgian Relief Societies.

From the point of the music lover, the concert compared most favorably with those given heretofore this year, which have been pronounced excellent on every occasion. Numerous encores were called for and each met with a response on the part of the audience which was most gratifying. The girls had sunk much time and effort in the preparation for the concert, and the result, both as to the calibre of the concert and as to the response, was certainly pleasing.

Especial credit is due Miss Ruth Miller, '19, Leader of the Club, for the success which has attended the work of the Club throughout the year just concluded. The manager, Miss Marian Miller, '18, and the assistant manager, Miss Henrietta Leyda, '19, are responsible for the efficient way in which the matters pertaining to this department of the Club have been conducted.

Thursday evening, Ford Memorial Chapel was patriotically decorated in the national colors, the credit for which is due the decorating committee: Florence Pappenhagen, '20; Izola McEntarfer, '21; Jean Freer, '18, and Inez Brumbaugh, '21.

A novel portion of the program was the presentation of the song, "Women of the U. S. A.," which was written, both words and music, by the Leader.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

the present Germany, but had been satisfied that she had acquired enough territory. The present Kaiser, being more greedy for the future Germany, had dismissed Bismarck. From that day until the present time, in less than half a century, the population of Germany almost doubled, and the Kaiser looked around for more room. He had been previously inflamed because his attempt to humiliate France with a heavy indemnity in the war of 1870 had resulted in the French nation paying off the entire sum in less than two years, and now when he attempted to colonize, his partial success inflamed him still further. Angry because France had paid her indemnity, a great German statesman had said, "The next time Germany meets France Germany will crush France."

The attempt to build up a merchant marine, and the greatest navy in the world brought Germany into competition with England, and the situation was altered in a large measure by two events of only a few decades ago. When Queen Victoria, who had been friendly to Germany, died, she was succeeded by Edward VII, who was very friendly to France. The second event was the rise of a French statesman named Del Casse, who had a great influence upon the French people, and who closed every speech with, "France should remain no longer under the heel of Germany." Soon after this the "Entente Cordiale" was formed, and from that time to this the situation has been steadily growing worse.

In 1905, in 1908, and again in 1911 deliberate attempts were made by Germany to humiliate France, and her repeated failure to do this angered her leaders more and more, until in 1914 the storm broke. It is of interest that the assassination of the Austrian archduke took place in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the very province that had been annexed by Austria only six years before contrary to every law of international right. The habit of the German Kaiser of considering treaties as mere scraps of paper is by no means a new one. As early as the time of Frederick the Great, that emperor's father put down on paper in instructions to his son, "A treaty should never stand in the way of the ambitions of an emperor."

President Crawford also said: "I never attempt to say what Germany is fighting for. I let the Kaiser speak, as he did on the occasion of the first anniversary of the beginning of the world war, 'The triumph of the greater Germany which soon must dominate all Europe is the single thing for which we are fighting.' The Kaiser has gone back to hellish depths and dragged out an ideal which we all believed dead. Can you conceive of the French or English taking such a position? Or the United States? No, rather we fight for the belief in the eternal principle of that democracy which Abraham Lincoln defined as government of the people, by the people, and for the people; democracy which means liberty and love. There can be no such thing under the black flag of Germany. The business of our lives cannot be complete until our white flag of righteousness, and love, and democracy shall fly where the black flag of Germany now flies."

In conclusion Dr. Crawford paid a stirring tribute to the courage of the French people, and in particular to the fine womanhood of France. He told of the sacrifice which he had seen in that country, and the cheerful willingness of the people to sacrifice everything. He then showed the relation of the true righteousness to the efficiency which we owe to our cause, and to our boys in France.

The service closed with the annual address to the senior class.

To the Graduating Class.
I need hardly remind you that you are leaving college under most unusual circumstances. You are the second class to graduate since the declaration of war. But the class of one year ago was not decimated as you are. We had only been in the war a short time then. The work of the year was well on towards completion. The whole class was graduated. It is not so with you. The war has made sad inroads into your roster. Fortunately death has not as yet claimed any of your number. But your ranks are badly broken, and you are widely separated. Fifteen members of your class are wearing the khaki. Four of them I had the pleasure of seeing recently in France. I looked upon them with pride. You have reason to think of them today with pride. They are an honor to you and to the college. They are among the best of those who beyond the seas are giving their all to the great cause to which America is committed. I sincerely hope that at no distant date matters will so shape that their names, with all the soldier boys of your class, shall be included with yours in the alumni register of the college. But the frightful breaking of your ranks is not the most striking of the circumstances under which you enter upon your commencement week. The fact which above all others claims your attention and mine is the great grim fact of war. Not war as men have known it in other generations and other centuries. But world war. War of stupendous proportions. It has already cost the lives of more than seven million men, and brought desolation to hundreds of thousands of happy homes. The challenge of the present crisis comes to every one of us. We cannot get away from it. You cannot. I cannot. If we are true and patriotic Americans, we must be on the conflict and on the side of righteousness. If I ever hear of any one of you talking in a half-hearted way about the meaning of this war, or our part in it, I shall be ashamed of him. The half-hearted American now is a traitor. The pacifist is a traitor. The doubter is a traitor. The issues of this war are vital to the nations. They are vital to human destiny. They are with meaning for freedom and righteousness. They constitute a challenge unprecedented since those large years when Rome became Christian. It will be many months before the sound of the big guns and bursting shells ceases to ring in my ears. I therefore speak to you this morning with deeper feeling than I should otherwise. I am not simply charging you to be patriotic. You will be that. At least in the ordinary sense. What I want to have you feel as you go out from us is that you have but one task until this war is over. Whether you are in the army or in the army behind the army, your high privilege and your high duty will be to sacrifice your all to the bringing of this great war for righteousness and this war to end war to a good finish.

A man asked me on the boat a week ago today whether I thought it was right to pray for the success of the allied armies. I said: What do you mean? If I knew of a Christian in America who was not praying, and praying earnestly, for the success of the allied armies, I should feel he was losing his religion. I charge you to pray for the success of our armies, and to back up your prayers with your actions. Your patriotism in college and your devotion to high ideals lead me to believe that you will do this. You go from us with our blessing and our benediction. I hail you this morning as a new acquisition to Christian American leadership. You have a great opportunity under the leadership of the strong Son of God, and protected with the breast-plate of righteousness you will fight a good fight and you will keep the faith.

WAR VESPER SERVICE AND CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION SERMON.

At 4:30 Sunday afternoon a "War Work Vesper Service" in connection with the Allegheny College commencement was held in the open air from the steps of Bentley Hall. Dr. Camden M. Cobern presided.

Dr. Guy E. Snively, registrar of Allegheny College, who was granted leave of absence to accept the directorship of the Southern Division of the American Red Cross, spoke of the Red Cross work in a short speech. After outlining some of the things which the Red Cross does for the armies, in addition to providing hospital service and caring for the sick, Dr. Snively told of the nature of his work in the South organizing and directing the work of Red Cross units and auxiliaries. He told of his very interesting experiences in organizing the Red Cross throughout Cuba and the Isle of Pines. He also mentioned seeing a number of Meadville boys and Allegheny College men, in the course of his work in the South.

President Crawford spoke in his Y. M. C. A. khaki uniform with an enthusiasm and confidence all his own. He told of numbers of experiences in embarrassingly close proximity to shell fire on the front, and throughout his story the keynote seemed to be the confidence, the fine spirit and the almost perfect self-control of the armies in the trenches.

Beginning with his voyage overseas, he outlined his experiences while in France. After spending a month as a regular secretary at a port of duty, he was assigned to speaking duty, and seldom spent a day with less than 15 hours of activity. At Brest he spoke to over 2500 American soldiers on Lincoln's birthday, and at Aix-la-bas he acted as chaplain for some time to the men who were freshly relieved from duty in the first line trenches. He also spent a full week in the region of the famous battlefield of the Marne, and a week with the Rainbow Division in the Lorraine sector.

In an interesting and enthusiastic way Dr. Crawford described a number of scenes he encountered, especially when he had the good fortune to be only a matter of yards from the first shell of the German long-range gun which exploded in Paris.

Sunday Evening.

The feature of Sunday evening was the annual sermon to the combined Christian Associations of the college in the Stone Church. After the prayer, by Dr. F. G. Henke, and the opening devotionals, with G. A. Stetson, president of the college Y. M. C. A., presiding, Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, D. D., LL. D., delivered the sermon of the evening.

He took as his topic the Fifth Commandment, and showed that it had been underemphasized, whereas "honor thy father and mother" is a commandment which has especial significance for America.

KALDRON APPEARS.

Although entirely against precedent, the "Kaldron" somehow appeared on time this year. Great credit is due the Student Senate Organization as well as the Editorial Board, for the efficiency with which the entire Kaldron was prepared for the printer in less than two months, and presented to the students on record time in the face of an impossible financial situation.

The book named the "Crawford Quarter Century" Kaldron, and is divided into four sections. Section 1 is devoted to a tribute to President Crawford, together with a summary of the things he has accomplished for Allegheny since his inauguration twenty-five years ago. It is interesting reading, and forms a fairly good record of the most important changes in the College under President Crawford's administration.

The second section is simply the Senior section from the should-have-been 1917 Kaldron. The third section comprises all the features which a pre-war Kaldron would contain, including the Senior cuts, together with cuts and records of the various school activities.

The fourth and last section contains the record, so far as could be obtained, of the Allegheny men in the service, together with a number of snapshots of them. While not complete, it is as complete as could be expected under the circumstances.

Of special interest, was the Unofficial Calendar, a revival of an old custom which could be made one of the most prized parts of the entire book. The cuts were in a few cases imperfect, due to the fact that they were made on zinc instead of copper—a necessary economy.

Although the book as a whole has some faults, Allegheny can certainly be proud of her first war Kaldron, and the features of interest so enhance the book that it will no doubt be prized in years to come.

PRESIDENT CRAWFORD'S ARRIVAL.

Tuesday, April 30th, there came the welcome news from New York City that President Crawford, of the American Y. M. C. A. Organization, had arrived safely in that city from France, the scene of his work during the past four and a half months. Allegheny received the news with enthusiasm and with thankfulness that the dangerous ocean voyage had again been made safely. Dr. Crawford left Allegheny on December 18th, after hurried preparations, with the plan in mind of returning for the 103rd Commencement Exercises of the College. His plans, as laid, have worked out perfectly so far as returning in time for this occasion are concerned.

After spending Tuesday at the Red Cross Headquarters in consultation with officials of the American Red Cross, Dr. Crawford left the city on train 5 on the Erie Railroad, arriving in Meadville Wednesday morning at ten-forty. A rousing student welcome at the train had been the plan in the minds of those in charge of the matter, but the fact that final examinations were in full sway at the time of the President's arrival prevented a very large attendance of the students at the train. The members of the Faculty were all present to greet the President and welcome him back to Allegheny after his period of national service in the warring regions. These, together with a considerable number of the student body who were fortunately not subject to examinations at that time, extended the welcome which every man and woman on the Hill desired to take a part in.

President Crawford was then taken to his home on North Main Street in Dr. Lee's car, and here the student body as a whole united in welcoming the returning father of the college. Examinations were postponed for the time being and from every building came its delegation of welcoming students, when Old Bentley's bell rang to herald the arrival of the President. Cheers and songs were given with the spirit that Allegheny men and women felt heightened at the home-coming, and in the midst of these, the President gave a short talk, not a speech, he said, but just a word to tell how glad he was to be back again on the Hill.

Almost immediately upon his return, Dr. Crawford took up his administrative duties as President of the College, and in co-operation with Acting-President Coburn again assumed his position as active head of the college. From that moment his time has been characteristically filled with numerous duties and innumerable engagements. Especially marked has been his presentation at various occasions, of the message he bears to this country from France, a wonderful message noted elsewhere in this paper.

Go to Mendel's for Society Brand Clothes.

ADDRESS TO DRAFTED MEN.

Saturday morning, President Crawford addressed the fourteen drafted men at the Court House just before they took train for camp, and instilled into them a little of the spirit of things over there. He told of the living conditions and food with which he, himself, had become intimately acquainted, and assured them of the best of conditions under the circumstances. He then told several instances of unusual bravery and fortitude shown by American troops in the great struggle, and elicited an outburst of enthusiasm from the fourteen men just leaving to prepare themselves for over there. In conclusion he said: "Take good care of your bodies, keep your minds clean, don't let the cobwebs in, keep your morals good, keep your heart with God and you'll come back home with victory and we'll be proud of you." A handclasp all around completed the President's charge to the men as he bid them Godspeed.

DR. GUY E. SNAVELY VISITS.

Popular Professor Back for a Few Days. Is Doing Fine Work as Director of Southern Red Cross.

Dr. Guy E. Snavely, Registrar and Professor of Romance Languages and Literatures, who has been absent during the past year on leave, and who has been engaged during this time in highly important Red Cross work, has been able to return for a short time during Commencement, and his presence, together with that of Dr. Crawford, seems again to make the Faculty family complete. Dr. Snavely's visit to the college is necessarily short, as he cannot leave his work for any length of time.

Dr. Snavely has had the privilege of organizing the territory of the Southern Division of the American Red Cross which comprises the States of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee. On May 1, 1917, there were but twenty-nine chapters in these five States, and now there are over three hundred and twenty-nine. The membership has grown to over one hundred thousand, and this is due largely to Dr. Snavely's efforts.

Another kind of work which the Red Cross has under its control is the military relief. The Bureau of Military Relief, nationally and locally, furnishes base hospitals, ambulance companies, Red Cross nurses, hospital garments, surgical dressings, knitted articles, and other necessary comforts that our boys should have who are laying down their lives at the battle-front, while those who are left behind are glad to give their time and money through the Red Cross in order to give them some little help. The Red Cross has already raised and equipped nearly fifty base hospitals which they have turned over to the War Department. Equipment of a base hospital includes five hundred beds and the necessary surgical and hospital supplies. The staff comprises twenty-five physicians, seventy-five nurses, and a personnel of 160 enlisted men. It is significant to note that the American flag was first carried to the western battle-front in France by six of the Red Cross Base Hospitals, those formed with the following hospitals as nuclei: Harvard University Hospital, Lakeside Hospital (Cleveland), Johns Hopkins Hospital, of which Institution Dr. Snavely is a graduate.

He states that one has an opportunity of studying human nature, but must have a keen sense of humor. On one evening, he says one speaks to military officers and soldiers, while perhaps the next evening he may speak to a group of farmers at a country school-house, who are rather timid about undertaking the work, thinking that if they joined, they would be immediately ordered to the trenches to bind up wounds of fallen soldiers.

Dr. Snavely writes: "It seems as if the human race at present is playing the role of witness in its own crucifixion. On its journey to Calvary it advances with a stolid indifference from a spiritual point of view, but in this ordinariness and selfishness that now prevail, there is certainly a bright ray flashing through the gloom. This ray is a spirit that animates the Red Cross. It is the spirit of the Nazarene who said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

Dr. Snavely's visit is rather limited as he expects to return to his work in Atlanta on Wednesday, May 8.

FACULTY BANQUET.

ing, the President's return to his Faculty family.

Foremost among the events of the evening stood the presentation of a beautiful loving cup with appropriate inscription engraved upon it.

Dr. Camden M. Coburn, Acting-President, occupied the place of master ceremonies during the evening, and a very feeling and impressive address was delivered by Dr. C. A. Darling.

The loving cup was presented to the President by Dr. W. A. Elliott, acting on behalf of the Faculty, who briefly spoke emphasizing the patriotism and the college sentiment attendant upon the occasion.

President Crawford answered with a deeply impressive and feeling speech of acceptance, and stressed the fact that the occasion and the gift would never be absent from memory. In concluding, he mentioned the work of the American army and of the Red Cross in France, speaking in glowing terms of the efficient and valuable work our men are doing over there. The Allegheny boys in France he mentioned especially and told of the wonderful part they are taking in the great struggle.
