

CHURCH EDITORS FORMERLY
COLLEGE EDITORS

(By J. W. Barkley.)

A remarkable feature of the recent Thoburn Jubilee was the fact that so much prominence was given to editors of our church papers. And indeed these men reach through their editorials so many more people than could be reached in any other way, that their selection must be made with scrupulous care. An example of the wide influence these editors have, is Dr. Stephen J. Herben, editor of "The Epworth Herald" the official organ of the Epworth League. One of the speakers said that "Dr. Herben writes editorials for a half million young people."

At the Campus editor's request I secured interviews with several of the most prominent visiting editors in Meadville during the jubilee, with a view of finding out whether any of them had ever been connected with college publications. Of the seven men interviewed, five have had such connection.

President R. E. Beetham Was a College Editor.

President R. Emery Beetham of Scio college was the first man I met, so I immediately asked him the question. He was editor of his college paper, the "Scio Collegian," for two years early in the '90's. Today in addition to his executive duties, he owns the Scio weekly paper, and with one associate annually edits and manages the East Ohio Conference daily.

He Visited a Girl Here

Dr. Herben, present editor of the "Epworth Herald," was, in his college days on the staff of the "Northwestern," of Northwestern University. He said of the Campus:

"All I know of the Campus is this: 'Some years ago, I was interested in a young woman, then professor of English Bible, and Dean of the women here. Whenever the "Campus" found I was in town, they put it in the paper."

"Did you marry her?" was asked. "Sure! Certainly I did," was the reply.

The "young woman" referred to was Miss Ida Foster, and the year of the occurrence the school year of 1890-91.

Not Editors in College

Neither Bishop Smith nor Dr. John J. Wallace, the former editor and his successor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, was ever connected with a college publication.

Once Editor at Northwestern

Dr. Claudius B. Spencer, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, was at one time editor of the college paper at Northwestern. When asked for a statement, he said: "I'm not bright enough to say any very bright things."

Founder of Argos at Wesleyan

Dr. Nast, editor of the Christian Apologist, a German paper with a circulation of 17,000, was one of the founders of the "Argos," of Wesleyan University of Middletown, Conn., in 1867. Dr. Nast said his specialty was the Student Volunteer movement.

A Wicked College Paper Manager

Dr. Claudius M. Stuart, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, was at one time business manager of the Kalamazoo College organ. "And," continued he "I used to do such wicked things as to invite cigarette advertisements."

GENUINE EASTER SPIRIT MANIFESTED.

The young women of the Christian Association have been manifesting the genuine Easter spirit. Saturday afternoon a few of the girls took an Easter offering to the Children's Home. There were eggs and souvenirs for the children and flowers for the old ladies. On Sunday afternoon twenty-five young ladies went out to the County Home and cheered the hearts of the inmates with flowers, music and readings.

Miss Lucy Loane led the Sunday evening meeting. The Chautauqua Vesper Service was used in connection with a well-rendered program of music.

Jubilee is Over

ONLY AN UPLIFTING
MEMORY NOW.

A Well Told Story.

(Written by J. W. Barkley.)

It is a very rare thing for the students of any college to have before them an event such as that which brought here a most distinguished group of men on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday of this week. It was Allegheny's way of paying tribute to her most distinguished son, a tribute well deserved and in which the whole world participated. The event had been so widely heralded in the denominational and secular papers, that a fear had grown up among those in charge that the Thoburn Jubilee would prove bigger outside of Meadville than it would inside, but if that doubt ever did exist, it has been dispelled by the services themselves, for college and town alike seemed to adequately realize the magnitude of the event they were entertaining.

Program and Speakers.

The program was not restricted to the study of missions, although that worthy underlying theme was evident throughout the three days. There was mental and moral recreation for men and women of all classes and ages. The list of speakers included six Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Corresponding Secretaries of the Boards of Home and Foreign Missions, and a score of editors, college presidents, teachers, and scholars of world-wide reputation.

The Program a Work of Printers' Art.

The printed program was a masterpiece of the printers' art and skill, a fitting souvenir for a glorious occasion. It was done on buff paper with light brown ink. Each page was surrounded with a narrow border of the same color, giving the whole a touch of neatness and elegance hard to describe. The cover, done in gold and blue, the college colors, bore the words, "Thoburn Jubilee, 1859-1909. Allegheny College, Meadville, Pennsylvania." Inside the covers were included a beautiful portrait of Bishop Thoburn, a sketch of his life, and the program of the exercises complete. Plenty of these attractive souvenirs had quarter of a million persons. When I went there the membership was only thirteen."

And yet the venerable man conducted himself throughout the Jubilee with that same modesty which has characterized him in his great life work.

Sunday, April 11—The Semi-Centennial Sermon.

As if indicating the interest which was to continue throughout the celebration, every seat was taken in the Stone Church Easter morning to hear the opening session and Bishop Thoburn's Semi-Centennial Sermon. Music appropriate to the day was beautifully rendered by a full choir, while the morning prayer was offered by Bishop David H. Moore. When the man in whose honor the Jubilee was held appeared at the platform, the entire congregation arose and sang the doxology.

A few moments later Bishop James M. Thoburn was introduced. His sermon was not a masterpiece of oratory, a model of exalted and impassioned style, but a simple recounting of his work in India, with lessons drawn from his experiences. The whole story itself was the best style he could have chosen, more eloquent than an impassioned appeal of the world's greatest orator. His text was: "Separate Me Barnabas and Saul for the Work Whereunto I Have Called Them."—Acts XIII:3.

Some Quotations.

Aside from the sentences quoted above some selections from his sermon are as follows:—

"Our message is one of hope. India is to be healed and saved. When our race learns to obey God, extreme poverty will disappear. God's law proclaims God's care for all, and a time will surely come when famines must disappear.

"If you ask me how this is to be brought about, I reply frankly that I cannot do it. I only know that, like that which we call a law of nature, some influence, some tendency, something favorable affects a community which fears God and keeps his commandments. The people of India will assuredly become Christians, and then they will begin to rise. The world today is made up of very poor people. The rich are very few, the well-to-do only a handful, but hundreds of millions live in a state which we would call starvation. This ought not so to be. One Burbank astonishes the world, but God knows and can summon forth a thousand more,

BISHOP THOBURN NOW A PHI KAPPA PSI

During the course of the Thoburn Jubilee a telegram was received from the Executive Council of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, sanctioning the reinstatement of Bishop Thoburn into the fraternity. Bishop Thoburn had been an active member during the early history of the order at Allegheny college, when the chapter had not yet been recognized by the college authorities, but was compelled to exist sub rosa.

With deep moral convictions he asked permission to sever his connection with an organization which could not make its identity known, and his honorable dismissal soon followed.

With the more favorable social position of the order in later days, no reason for his resignation was found to exist, and he was welcomed back as one of the old boys.

An informal dinner party was given in honor of Bishop Thoburn at the fraternity home Tuesday, at which the town alumni and visiting members of the fraternity were called in.

AN ECHO MEETING

Linked with the appreciation of Bishop Thoburn's glorious work in India, there was at the jubilee another, deeper purpose included in the first—a desire to interest students and student bodies everywhere in Bishop Thoburn's chosen work, missions. How much has been accomplished in this line will never be known until some similar event in future years leads men, grown old in service to say, "I received my inspiration at the Thoburn Jubilee."

The immediate effect of this great event was evident in the Y. M. C. A. meeting of last Wednesday evening, when a room full of earnest young men told of the benefit they had received personally from the Thoburn Jubilee. The meeting was under the leadership of Mr. Howard Broadbent, but short talks were heard from Fishel, Grandey, Morrison, Morgan, Stidger and others. All echoed the great theme of the celebration, deeper devotion and duty. As one member present said, "It would not have surprised me if there had been at that meeting Wednesday night, volunteers for lives of missionary service."

Bishop James M. Thoburn.

He retired at the Baltimore Conference last year, and has come to pass the remainder of his life near the college he loves so well.

What he has accomplished may best be shown by a quotation from his anniversary sermon as follows:—

"I have seen many thousands of both sexes renounce their ancestral faiths and formally adopt Christian religion. In our own church we have, including children, probably a

Sunday Afternoon.

Two representatives of important Methodist enterprises were heard at the Sunday afternoon platform meeting at the Stone Church, Dr. Stephen J. Herben, Editor of the Epworth Herald, and Miss Lilavati Singh of Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, India.

A mother asked her child why a friend had spoken of her as "an attractive child." The little one thought for a moment and said: "I loved everybody there and I guess it must have shined through."

WE PITY THEM.

We are in no mood in the wake of such an uplifting influence, to criticize, but we do pity some few men who preferred the Theatricals to the hearing of some of the world's greatest men.

AN EXPLANATION.

We make no attempt in this special Thoburn issue to re-print the addresses. For two good reasons. They were published in the daily papers of Meadville and President Crawford is planning to have a book of the Jubilee printed in which all will be printed.

WALKED THE SAME PATHS.

When we heard such men as Bishops Moore, Hamilton, Smith and other great men speak a tribute not only to Bishop Thoburn, but to Bishop Oldham and others of our alumni who are still carrying on the great work in India, a new thrill of pride went through our veins as we thought that these same men once walked the same paths that we walk; sat in the same rooms in which we sit; dreamed the same dreams that we dream.

ALLEGHENY IN WORLD WORK.

It was a remarkable thing to note, that nearly every prominent speaker, Bishops, Editors and Educators, who attended the Thoburn Jubilee, were able back in their lives to resurrect some close connection with Allegheny College, many of them being graduates or who had relatives who are graduates of "Old Allegheny" as each speaker seemed fond of calling us.

This thing made us realize the vital factor our college has been in the progress of the great church work in the world.

THE OVERFLOW FLOOD.

In addition to that beautiful overflow meeting in Chapel Wednesday morning, there is another overflow that will never leave the lives of Allegheny students. That overflow was one of influence, an overflow that might well be called a flood, sweeping men on to life decisions and soul growths. There is a story in another column of the Campus of the Wednesday night prayer service in which men tell of the influence of these services on their lives. We doubt not that the channels of many lives will be changed by the rush of influence that this overflow has brought into, it may be, some dry and naked, stoney life river beds.

WAS NOTED FAR AND WIDE

Although not stated publicly Mr. Robert Laidlaw in private interview made for this paper a very interesting statement. He said that when he landed on the Pacific coast, upon opening the San Francisco papers, the first thing that caught his eye was an account of the Thoburn Jubilee. He boarded a train and crossed the western plains to St. Louis. There he purchased a big daily and on its front page he again read a story of the services at Allegheny College. This seemed wonderful, but we have it from the lips of the great English statesman himself that upon arriving in Chicago he once again in the Chicago dailies was confronted with the same story.

It only shows us that our college, through Bishop Thoburn, has been during the past few days vividly before the United States, far and wide.

PAY TRIBUTE TO OUR OWN MEN.

Among all the great speakers who were here during the Jubilee, our own home men made us proud.

President W. H. Crawford with characteristic grace and reserved eloquence was master of ceremonies.

Dr. C. M. Coburn in five minutes on Monday afternoon made an address that was second to no other talk on the afternoon's program.

Dr. E. A. Smith made such an impression with his short talk on Mission Study that one of the Bishops suggested that it be printed for future use.

Dr. H. G. Dodds in a very fitting manner, simply and eloquently presented Bishop Thoburn with the house.

In three instances were our own professors referred to by the speakers, said orators paying tribute publicly to Dr. F. C. Lockwood, Dr. E. A. Mulfinger, Dr. C. M. Coburn and Dr. Jonathan Hamnett.

THE FRAGRANCE WILL LINGER ALWAYS.

A conversation we overheard in a class room on Wednesday morning epitomizes our best thoughts as to the influence of the Thoburn Jubilee:

Mr. A.—"Well, B, old man, are you over the meetings yet?"

Mr. B.—"With no touch of sarcasm in his voice.—"No, A, nor do I ever expect to get over them."

Such is the spirit of all of us. The meetings have left a fragrance that will never leave our lives.

Dr. C. M. Coburn tells us that in some of the old Egyptian vaults when they are opened after being sealed for thousands of years, that the fragrance of flowers still remains. So will there remain, sealed in our lives we believe through the years of eternity the fragrance from the great lives that have just gone from our midst.

EVERYTHING READY

Everything is being made ready for the three great platform contests in which Allegheny will soon be engaged. First comes the initial meeting of the newly formed Oratorical League at Wooster, April 30th, in which will participate representatives from Wooster, Dickinson and Allegheny. Mr. Wm. L. Stidger will represent Allegheny with his oration "A Life Tragedy."

If you happened to see, during vacation, a man with a haggard look on his face and a stack of Government documents under his arm, he was doubtless one of the Varsity debaters loading and priming for the contest to come in May. These debates will be with Kenyon and Cornell Congress, and it is expected that last year's record will be duplicated.

The Forum will begin work on a new line next Wednesday. Speaker Swick having announced that some easy popular question will be up for discussion. The new spring atmosphere seems to discourage a heavy question like the one for Varsity debate. A good attendance is desired.

DR. WILLIAM A. ELLIOTT

Dr. William A. Elliott of the college faculty, whose appearance on the lecture platform always means a crowd, will lecture in Ford Memorial chapel on Tuesday evening, April 20th, on the subject, "A Trip Through Thessaly," is one that will appeal to students, coming as a result of personal experience. Illustrations secured with difficulty for the one evening will be used. The event is under the auspices of the Classical Club.

L. W. SHERWIN TO SPEAK

Owing to the sudden death of Sam Maxwell's father, A. J. Nelson, vice-president of the Y. M. C. A. is tending the conference of the Y. M. C. A., presidents of the state, at Lancaster, Pa. The meetings begun Thursday night, to continue for several days. Mr. Nelson will probably be given an opportunity to report the meeting here at some future date.

An interesting feature of the meeting to Allegheny students is that L. W. Sherwin of last year's class is on the program. Mr. Sherwin is now Inter-Collegiate secretary for the city of Philadelphia, and is spoke of as a specialist in his work.

THE ALDEN ACADEMY

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Allegheny College with Mr. Frank A. Arter, President of the Board in the chair, the following actions were taken:

1. That no girls be registered in the Preparatory school until such such time as the finances of the college will justify the building of a dormitory for their accommodation.

2. That the name of the Preparatory school be changed to the Alden Academy.

On behalf of the Board of Trustees it should be understood that this action with reference to girls is not in any sense a deviation from the policy of the college which favors co-education. The question of co-education has not been under discussion. What led to the action was the fact that for the past two years there has not been room in Huling's Hall for the preparatory girls. The hall is filled to overflowing with college women. President Crawford is authority for the statement that in his judgement at least thirty or forty more young women could be registered next fall at the college if there were dormitory accommodations for them. Under the circumstances there seemed no way but to discontinue the registration of girls at the Alden Academy.

The name, the preparatory school of Allegheny college, has long been felt to be not a name in sense but rather a description of what the school is. There is no other school in America with which the name Alden is in any way connected. It seemed fitting therefore, that since the school will continue to be to a more or less degree, associated with the college, that the name be changed to Alden Academy, in memory of Timothy Alden the founder and first president of Allegheny college. The propriety of this action is the more evident from the fact that Timothy Alden while here, spent the greater part of his time in secondary school work. Timothy Alden was fifth in lineal descent from the Alden family of colonial fame, and this fact will lend prestige to the young institution.

On being consulted about the matter Dr. Nathan C. Chaffer, superintendent of Public Instruction in Pennsylvania, favored the action and said that he believed the school would grow in number far beyond our expectations and he said among other things "I do not know of a first class preparator for boys in the state of Pennsylvania that is not crowded." The Alden Academy, located as it is quite a distance from any other first class academy, has a large field from which to draw students, Northwestern Pennsylvania, Southwestern New York, and Northeastern Ohio.

Plans are on foot for building a mens dormitory in connection with the academy in the near future. With the high standing the preparatory school has already won for itself in athletics and other activities great strides can be expected from the enterprising institution.

die each week. His subject was "High Ideals for High Service." His appeal for best service is especially worthy of quotation:

"The best men and women must give themselves to the best service. It would be absurd to put a stoker in command of a battleship. The best equipped men are sought for the places of greatest responsibility in trade and in the professions. So, in the ampler fields of higher service where character is to be formed, civilizations created, races redeemed, and the Kingdom of God established, the best equipped men and women should address themselves to the most difficult tasks."

Miss Lilavati Singh.

With all the charm and attractiveness native dress and accent could lend, Miss Singh told of the work of Bishop Thoburn and his sister in her own country—a tribute from the other side. She told the history, purpose and ideals of Lucknow College, and closed with a plea for help in making the greater India.

Sunday Evening Meetings.

Attendants at Epworth League Sunday evening were given an especial treat, in the presence of Bishop Moore, who led, delivering a helpful and inspiring address.

At seven-thirty a crowded auditorium greeted Dr. Homer J. Stuntz, First Assistant Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, who spent many years in India under Bishop Thoburn's direction. His theme was, "A Review of Bishop Thoburn's Fifty Years in India." In the first place, the speaker told of his own answer to the Bishop's appeal for twenty-five missionaries for India. He then passed to a review of the time he spent abroad, and then to a recounting of the Bishop's remarkable achievements. Among them he named first, the district conference, thought out and planned by Dr. Thoburn; second, what is known as "the Mission"; third, the summer school idea; fourth, the mass movement policy. Then, the personal qualifications: Largeness of grasp, tremendous powers of physical endurance, the gift of versatility, great courage to take hold of difficult things, a saving sense of humor, simple and direct consecration of God, and absorption of all his powers in his work in India. The whole address was a fitting climax for the first day of the Thoburn Jubilee.

Monday, April 12th, at 10 O'clock.

Before students, faculty, visitors and delegates, the conference on the relation of the college to foreign missions was opened at ten o'clock Monday morning with Bishop Moore in the chair. A feature of the opening exercises was the presentation of Dr. Jonathan Hamnett, a former college teacher of Bishop Thoburn, to the audience amid ready applause. In the absence of Rev. Thomas Nicholson, D. D., Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Education, his paper was read by Dr. Stuntz, the speaker of the preceding evening. The paper, entitled "The College and the College Man in Foreign Missionary Achievement," was in outline as follows:

"I. The College has been the birth place and nursery of foreign missionary movements.

"II. The College man has been the typical foreign missionary leader.

"III. The College man has been the chief factor in shaping the Christian ideals which have conquered the heathen world."

Dr. Stuntz responded eloquently on short notice for Dr. Levi Gilbert, Editor of the Western Christian Advocate, on the subject, "The Study of Missions in Our Colleges." He advocated the placing of missionary study in the regular college curriculum.

Bishop Urges Publication of Dr. E. A. Smith's Address.

Discussion was opened by Dr. J. W. King, pastor of Bishop Thoburn's old home church at St. Clairsville, Ohio, and continued by Dr. E. A. Smith of the Allegheny College faculty. His story of mission work in Allegheny College was intensely interesting, and well received by the entire gathering. The members of the College Mission Study Class appeared at this session with appropriate badges.

Bishop Moore urged the publication of Dr. Smith's address in book form, a sufficient compliment to its worth.

Leonard, Bishop McDowell, Forbes, Wright, Thoburn, Coburn.

The afternoon session was presided over by Bishop Joseph F. Berry, D. D., L. L. D. The first two addresses continued the conference on the relation of the college to foreign missions as follows:

The Reverend Adna B. Leonard, D. D., L. L. D., Corresponding Secretary of Board of Foreign Missions—"The Ever Widening Field of Opportunity."

Bishop William Fraser McDowell, D. D., L. L. D.—"What Can Be Done to Increase Interest in Foreign Missions Among the College Students of America?"

The second conference was taken up at this point, the "Conference on the Relation of the College to Home Missions." The addresses were as follows:—

The Reverend Robert Forbes, D. D., Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension—"The Foreigner in Our Midst."

The Reverend F. H. Wright, D. D., Superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church Union, Pittsburgh—"The City to be Redeemed."

Discussion led by the Reverend T. R. Thoburn, D. D., Erie, Pa., and the Reverend C. M. Coburn, D. D., Thoburn Professor of English Bible, Allegheny College.

Evening Mass Meeting.

Two very noted speakers were heard at the Stone Church Monday evening in mass meeting addresses which attracted hundreds. The first address was by Bishop David H. Moore, on the subject, "The Awakening in China." The entire subject was an impersonal tribute to Bishop Thoburn, for, as the speaker said, "China would not today have been so far advanced were it not for Bishop Thoburn. His influence of the missionary movement in India carried to China, as there is a connecting link between these two countries." Some valuable illustrative statistics were given.

The home missionary interests were represented by Bishop John W. Hamilton. He said with reference to his cause, "When foreigners come to our shores, we treat them with indifference. It is God's idea that these people should intermingle with us. The unity of the Christian family stands out plainly. God made one man, and that man was the father of man. One-half of the population of this country is of foreign birth, but despite the fact, the Christian movement has been upheld. Destiny has thrown the people together for the upbuilding of the great masses of people."

Tuesday, April 13—Gems From the Morning Addresses.

On Tuesday morning the conference on the relation of the college to home missions was continued with Bishop Charles W. Smith, D. D., L. L. D., presiding. The speakers were The Reverend Claudius B. Spencer, D. D., L. L. D., Editor of Central Christian Advocate—"The Empire of the West"; The Reverend Herbert M. Welch, D. D., L. L. D., President of Ohio Wesleyan University—"The New Call to Social Service"; The Reverend Charles J. Little, D. D., L. L. D., President of Garrett Biblical Institute—"The Training of the Worker." Discussion was led by The Reverend John J. Wallace, D. D., Editor Pittsburg Christian Advocate, and continued by Drs. Leonard and Forbes. Some sentences from these addresses are as follows: "The West is led by the students of Christian schools"—Dr. Spencer. "As the center of population approaches Kansas, it will be met by graduates of the Christian churches and colleges."—Dr. Spencer.

"Our leaders in everything are to be servant of the people. From a place of privilege, they go to a place of opportunity."—Dr. Welch.

"The new call to social service must echo through the halls of learning, and the greatest must become ministers to the least."—Dr. Welch.

"The way to God is first, the Christian home; second, the Christian school."—Dr. Little.

"We are not through with the conception of a life of faith."—Dr. Little.

"Our Methodist colleges were founded by men who were essentially home missionaries."—Dr. Wallace.

"Young men and young women today have a splendid opportunity to emulate the spirit of this noble man (Bishop Thoburn)."—Dr. Wallace.

The Formal Tribute Service.

With the exception of Bishop Hartzell of Africa, who was detained by illness, every speaker was present for the formal tribute exercises of Tuesday afternoon. The academic procession forming from Bentley to the Chapel by way of the Library walk, the students forming two lines through which the faculty and guests, headed by President Crawford and Bishop Thoburn passed, then falling in behind, occurred at 1:45. It was a beautiful sight, one which will not soon be forgotten.

With Mrs. Porter at the organ, the exercises opened with President Crawford presiding. After the Scripture reading and prayer by Bishops Hamilton and Smith respectively, and the reading of extracts from some of the five hundred congratulatory letters and telegrams received, the addresses of the day were heard as follows: The Reverend W. V. Kelley, D. D., L. L. D., Editor of the Methodist Review; the Reverend C. A. R. Janvier, D. D., a former missionary in India under the Presbyterian Board; and Bishop John W. Hamilton, D. D., L. L. D.

PRESIDENT CRAWFORD, Meadville

ped in British and American flags, were presented to the Bishop, whose Jubilee this event was to close, by the Reverend Horace G. Dodds, D. D., Superintendent of Meadville District. The response was simple, but effective, just as Bishop Thoburn's long life has been. In the absence of Dr. Jonathan Hamnett, the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Thoburn himself.

Just before the presentation of the house and check, fifty beautiful roses were presented Bishop Thoburn, by William Mould, president of the Senior class, representing the students of Allegheny College.

The Bishop stood on the platform for a few minutes at the close of the exercises and shook hands with the hundreds who crowded up for this privilege.

The Banquet at 6:30.

The whole Jubilee closed with an elegant banquet at 6:30 Tuesday evening in the Commons Room, Cochran Hall, in honor of Bishop Thoburn. A delicious menu was served by Mr. Bave, at the conclusion of which the following responses were heard with Mr. Frank A. Arter, president of the Board of Trustees of Allegheny College, as toastmaster: Dr. Flood, Bishop Smith, Dr. Stuart, Dr. Leonard, Dr. Little, Dr. Thirkield and Bishop Thoburn. Music was furnished by the Northwestern Orchestra and the College Glee Club.

And so closed what we may call the greatest event so far in Allegheny's career. And it will be a better Allegheny for this event. Who knows how many hearts have been touched, and how many ideals raised! Yet whatever such results there may be, the memory of the Thoburn Jubilee will always be a pleasant one for those who had any share in it.

BASE BALL BEAMS BRIGHTLY

Captain Gahan of the 1909 baseball team, is making good use of the fine weather by marshalling his men to Athletic park for regular daily practice. Three men were lost from last year's nine, "Cot" Nelson at second base, Clyde Braymer behind the bat and Merl King in the field. These vacant places have several new candidates worthy of the positions, and some of these men also may crowd a few of the old men to the side when the final test is applied in selecting the team.

Of the old men the following are reporting regularly: Captain Gahan, first base; Benedict and Firestone, Pitchers; Baker and Weidner, third base and short-stop; Miner, Harris and W. Grant, field.

A catcher's place and second base will be to fill from new material, but from the notable prospects with splendid records of former days, several varsity men can easily be selected. In this list must be mentioned: Foreman, Rublee, Short Fixel, Townsend, Kennedy, Dunn, Grant, Larcley, Hamman, Love, Ball, Goodwin and Hill. The schedule of 9 games given below shows three at home and six abroad, scheduled for certain. This will give the team two good trips:

Manager Deemer's Revised Schedule
May 8—At Meadville, Oberlin
May 12—W. & J., at Washington
May 13—W. & J. at Washington
May 14—West Va. University, at Morgantown.

May 15—West Va. University, at Morgantown.
May 22—Carnegie Tech. at Meadville.

May 25—Grove City at Grove City
May 26—Westminster at Wilmington.

May 29—Westminster at Meadville.

Games with Carnegie and St. Vincent are pending.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. S. L. MAXWELL.

Allegheny College was shocked, late last Sunday evening, to hear of the very sudden death of Mr. S. L. Maxwell, of North Park Avenue. He had retired to his room for a short rest, and a few minutes afterward, a member of the family entered the room and noticed that he was not breathing. When a physician arrived Mr. Maxwell was dead. The death cast a shadow over the Thoburn Jubilee exercises, and Dr. Crawford spoke fittingly of the occasion at the opening of the Jubilee program Monday morning.

The Maxwell family have been living on North Park Avenue during the college season, returning to Oil City each summer. Two sons survive, Sam, of the Junior class, president of the Y. M. C. A., and Willard, of the Freshman class; also four daughters, Mrs. W. H. Love, Independence, Kansas; Mrs. J. B. Mandwith, Independence, Kansas; and Misses Ina and Mary, Meadville.

The funeral services and interment were at Oil City on Wednesday.

THAT OVERFLOW CHAPEL SERVICE.

What President W. H. Crawford pleased to call an "overflow meeting," rendered the chapel service last Wednesday morning one of the best of the series brought here by the Thoburn Jubilee. Six of the distinguished visitors of the preceding three days were present, five of whom addressed the students briefly, while Dr. A. B. Leonard read the Scripture lesson and offered the prayer. Brief but inspiring addresses were given by Bishop C. W. Smith, President Herbert Welch of Ohio Wesleyan University, Dr. Nast, editor of the Christian Apologist, Dr. Thirkield, president of Howard University and Dr. Stuart, editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate.

ART EXHIBIT

Many Allegheny people will take advantage of the splendid opportunity to see some of the world's famous paintings at Library Hall from the 15th, to the 30th of this month. The event is the third annual exhibition under the auspices of the Meadville Art Association.

The collection includes the work of such noted artists as Ben Foster, Redfield, Oetman, Billinger, Groll, and Arthur Hall, members of both the old and new schools, thus affording a pleasing variety of subjects.

A PREP PROJECT

The ingenious Preps are not proposing to be outdone by their older rivals on College hill in the matter of establishing precedents and starting new organizations. Their enterprising spirit broke forth February 22 and caused a successful banquet to be carried out which had never been possible before.

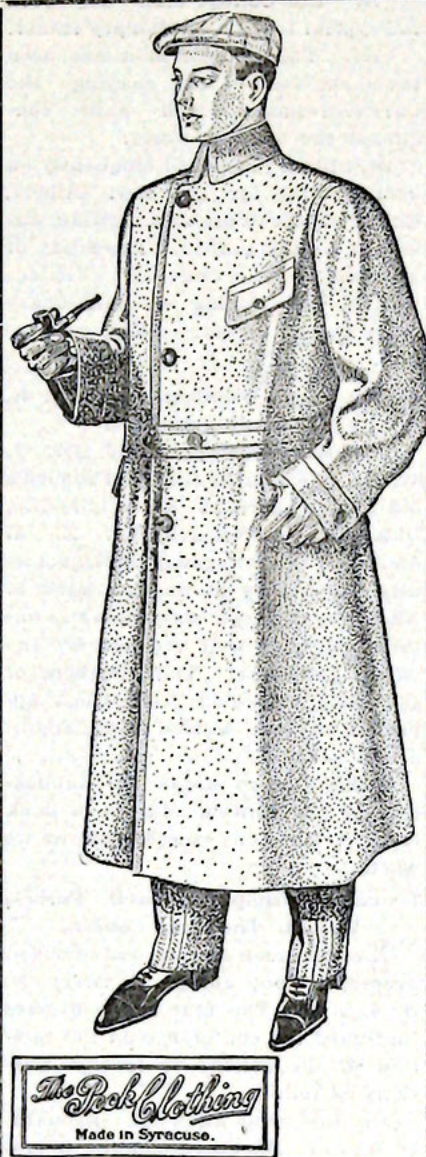

Since the Duzer Du was organized in College the Preps got their dramatic instincts to working in unison. With R. L. Cullom as the Dave Belasco of the movement, a dramatic event will be pulled off Friday night, April 30, in the College Gymnasium.

The production will be "A Shakespeare Walter Cure," a burlesque in three acts. A notable array of talent has been summoned to the task and after many weeks of regular rehearsals, a really polished production is promised. John Fox, who won worldwide fame as Mrs. Malaprop in "The Rivals," is coaching the play in an able manner, and to say this is to vouchsafe the dramatic success of the burlesque.

KENYON ON THE 23D

On Friday night, April 23, Allegheny College will meet Kenyon on the home platform in debate on the question, "Resolved, That National Banks Should Be Secured by a Government Guarantee Fund." Allegheny's team, made up of Messrs. Lewis, Harper and Yost, will debate the affirmative. Since the preliminaries came off the debaters-elect have been spending much time and silent effort mastering the question, and they deserve a full house next Friday night. Allegheny's men are capable of making a fine showing if they have the proper encouragement and support from the student body.
