

Miss Tarbell

I received a letter from Mrs Brown saying that you had been in Springfield and had left ~~left~~ your address, wishing me to give you a written denial of the story that Mr Lincoln had ever failed to make his appearance at the time appointed to ~~to~~ marry Mary Todd. I could not deny this, as I was not in Springfield for some months before, and after this occurrence was said to have taken place, but I was in close correspondence with relatives and friends, during all this time, and never heard a word of it. The late Judge Broadwell, told me that, he had asked Mr Ninian Edwards, about it and Mr Edwards, told him no such thing had ever taken place

All I can say is, that, I unhesitatingly do not believe ~~do not believe~~ such an event ever occurred. I thought I had never heard of this, till I saw it in Herndon's book. I have since been told that Lamson, mentions the same thing. I read Lamson, at the time he published, and felt very much disgusted, but did not remember this particular assertion. The first chapters of Lamson's book, were purchased from Herndon, so Herndon, is responsible for the whole.

Miss Tarbell:

I received a letter from Mrs. Brown, saying that you had been in Springfield and had left your address, wishing me to give you a written denial of the story that Mr. Lincoln had ever failed to make his appearance at the time appointed to marry Mary Todd.

X I ~~could~~ not deny this, as I was not in Springfield for some months before, and after, this occurrence was said to have taken place, but I was in close correspondence with relatives and friends, during all this time, and never heard a word of it.

The late Judge Broadwell, told me that he had asked Mr. Ninian Edwards, about it and Mr. Edwards told him no such thing had ever taken place.

All I can say is, that, I unhesitatingly, do not believe such an event ever occurred. I thought I had never heard of this till I saw it in Herndon's book. I have since been told that Lamon mentions the same thing, I read Lamon, at the time he published, and felt very much disgusted; but did not remember this particular assertion. The first chapters of Lamon's book, were purchased from Herndon, so Herndon is responsible for the whole.

With kindly remembrance,
