Dear Mrs. Seaman:

Indeed I am glad enough that you did obey that impulse and write me that you liked "All in the Day's Work." I greatly enjoyed your letter. One of the pleasures I have had from the publication of the book has been the number of letters comparing experiences. I have had none quite so intimate as yours in regard to Bishop Vincent and the Chautauqua course. That is a charming story you tell about Dr. Whitney and the Bishop and so characteristic.

You are quite right it was the grandmother of all the correspondence courses. Someday I think someone will figure out better than has been done yet the impulse it gave to adult education in the country at large and the tremendous influence it had in popularizing good reading.

Thank you again for your letter, dear Mrs. Seaman, and believe me

Very sincerely yours

Mrs. George Seaman
