My dear Ishbel Ross:

You certainly started something when you wrote that interview with me - a shower of telegrams and telephone calls and roses and things. I feel that they should all go to you.

More than one of my friends spoke of the dignified and pleasing fashion in which you have done your report. Thank you very much.

And won't you please beg the Art Department of the Herald Tribune to destroy that picture they used. I have never made such a request before though I have many times shuddered at my face in print. What I object to in this is that it makes me look like a degenerate. Isn't that true, dear Miss Ross? Of course this is only between you and me. A note to thank you for treating me so kindly - more than my deserts.

Very sincerely

Miss Ishbel Ross
