"Peace Propositions".

Apropos of peace propositions in Confederate congress by Leach

Speaking generally, it is safe to say that if there had been any foundation for the unconditional surrender of the Confederate army which is rumored, we would have had peace long ago. But the quarrel is a mutual one, ---- there can be no peace till terms of which are not dictated and enforced by the Congress of the U.S."

what matter in dispute, negotiations for peace will be in order and not till then.

July 22. Morning that report-ed that was privately circulated in Washington to say The editor of this paper has taken part in a peace proposition to his position as this negotiations than were fully authorized & more than authorized; but there ---- the moment that had no immediate success. ---- all that he can now add to his former inferences that the pacification of the country is neither so difficult nor so distant as seems to be generally supposed.

Davis on Peace.

W Ca. brought Davis to open Peace negotiations with Lincoln. Davis replied that he be separately sought peace at present rejected - & answered he has never sought Peace in any other than terms of the recognition of in advance of his Confederacy as an independent power.

June 10 An answer to attacks on administration for refusing to listen to Confederate proposal to unite Stephens to W. S. said "That naked truth is this: We will never, the Rebels have never been ready & willing to treat with our Govt on any other footing than total independence" and this we have not been inclined to concede. When they (or we) shall have been brought to a willingness to concede this Post. July 22.

Mr G. felt like the help & buried himself getting the post. He went to the Post but Mr Lemmert used to dealing with rebels, with a hard sense that always comes to his aid, spoke to all when it concerned, that he was ready to hear propositions for the reinstatement of peace, the allegiance of the states, & the abandonment of slavery" — give safe conduct & settlement reinstates.

Same time that Mr Gurley had the bowl pulled over his eyes Jacques & Clemens in R. Mr G. in returning said J. Davis said to me,

"This war must go on till the last Southern sympathizer falls in his tracks, & his children wipe his musket & fight on until, unless you acknowledge our right to self-government. We are not fighting for slavery. We are fighting for independence, & that is determined we will have."

committed the murder in L & finally Mrs. S. went to his relation (a Mr in Congress) to ask Mr L. to dismiss the boy Mr S. went up to Mr L with the letter in his pocket & asked for the boys release. Mr L. "I can't do it Clanton won't let me." Hill said Mr Clanton finally after arguing the case - "I'll just send word to old Tom — to come on & plead his own case"

"Give me that letter" said Mr L and accused - he wrote. Given that young man his discharge (look up exact name).
