Dear Miss Tarbell:

I am sending you a folder and other literature about Clewiston, Florida. A reason for this is that I am going there in October and will be there this winter as manager of the Clewiston Inn. I know that all of my friends will be interested to know this, and you may be sure, if you come to Florida this winter, that you will get a hearty welcome at this charming Inn on the shore of beautiful Lake Okeechobee.

The Clewiston Inn is a modern hotel standing on a ridge overlooking the lake. And Lake Okeechobee is at once one of the wonders of Florida and one of its great natural beauty spots. With its broad expanse of more than 700 square miles, its waters teeming with such gamey fish as the big mouth bass, Lake Okeechobee is just now coming into its own as the jewel of southern Florida. For years shrewd sportsmen have been seeking its waters for fishing and its shores for the pursuit of wild duck, quail, wild turkeys and deer. Now no longer isolated, it offers still these attractions. An automobile journey of less than ten miles from Clewiston will put the visitor, with a guide, into picturesque reaches where wild game a-bounds. And competent guides are available.

Without being a "wild spot" Clewiston retains, by its proximity to such hunting grounds, this appeal to the sportsman. Clewiston is 65 miles from West Palm Beach on the east coast of Florida and 65 miles from Fort Myers, at the Gulf coast. It is an outgrowth of a notable reclamation plan which is really part of a still more notable plan to establish at Clewiston and in the surrounding country a great sugar cane industry, with sugar and celotex mills.

Meanwhile a considerable agriculture on other lines is growing up near the fields of sugar cane---the growing of green vegetables in midwinter for the northern markets.

Whether you come to idle and rest, to work at farming or to build much needed houses, you are welcome at the Inn. Perhaps you will help me to spread the news of this lovely winter place by sending me names and addresses on a postal card of some of your friends who may go south this winter. I will appreciate the courtesy.

Now come on down where the sun does not take a vacation in winter and where I am sure you can have a delightful time.

Very sincerely yours,

Julia E. Sanders.
