THE ALLEGHENY CAMPUS

LXXVIII, No. 12

ALLEGHENY COLLEGE, MEADVILLE, PA.

Campus Given Additional $200 By AUC

Money totaling $489.25 has been recently found in ASG accounts of the 1960-61 administration. John Brancato, Treasurer of AUC, stated in a report to the council that the money was left by the 1960-61 administration with the expressed stipulation that the money should be used in the establishment of an ASG scholarship fund.

AUC voted to withdraw $200.00 from the present scholarship fund in order to place it in the account of The Campus. The council noted that this money would enable The Campus staff to continue publishing a newspaper without having to cut down on the amount of photographs and the number of pages in each edition, a move which was proposed by Campus editor Andy Shapiro last week to meet present financial difficulties.

Two scholarships of $125.00 each will still be awarded by AUC for student use during the third term; the money for these awards will be provided from the fund of the 1960-61 ASG administration. A balance of $289.25 will remain in the Scholarship Fund for use by the next ASG administration.

John Brancato also announced the college's approval of the $350 loan negotiated by AUC for the Allegheny Outing Club.

Norm Greene was given a vote of confidence by the council to go ahead with his previous plans for a theater-in-the-round production during the third term. Greene asked for the vote in view of the fact that the Allegheny Playshop had suddenly announced plans to also do a musical third term. The Playshop event is an unexpected and unscheduled one, and is the first time in eight years that the Playshop has attempted something of this nature. Greene had been voted $300 by ASG for his original idea of a theater-in-the-round production of "Me and Juliet," early last term.

Jim Meadowcroft noted that no definite statement on the students' desire to change this term's day-off will be forth-coming until President Pelletier returns to the campus. Meadowcroft also announced that the Rev. Gary Davis, who will give a concert in the CU on Saturday evening, will take part in a guitar workshop in the CU on Saturday afternoon. All students interested in music are urged to attend.

Tutoring Service Started By Citizenship Council

Allegheny's Citizenship Council has launched a tutoring program in conjunction with the Meadville chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Seven Allegheny students are meeting with a class each Thursday night from 7:30 to 10 in St. John's Baptist Church.

Twenty-five Negroes, with educational backgrounds ranging from no formal education at all to a third year college level, make up the adult class.

The curriculum for the initial ten week program includes fundamental mathematics, English grammar and usage, spelling and vocabulary improvement. Math instructors are June Fair, Richard Simpson, and Benjamin Haytock. Laura Miller, Patricia Bell, Camilla Braden and Connie Egan are teaching English.

Citizenship Council Student Chairman Robert Warbin wished to assure the many students who have applied for positions in the community that their applications have not been mislaid. He stated that in order to have a sound program, enthusiasm must be insured against weakness in the campus program.

Warbin asked for the continued interest and patience of those who have applied, and reminded them that the program will provide a chance to be of great service to many organizations which need help, as well as the satisfaction of useful community participation.

GRE Notice

Graduate Record Examinations in the Institutional Program (departmentally required of seniors in Biology, Chemistry, Economics, Geology, Philosophy, Physics, and Sociology) will be given here January 25. Please note the time and location of the tests.

Afternoon — Advanced Tests — 1:30 — Quigley.

Last Drop Reopens With Gary Davis

What has happened to the Coffee House? Has the Last Drop finally dripped? Most emphatically not. The Coffee House is in the process of being moved from its former out-grown quarters to the South Lounge of the Student Union. It is due to reopen on Saturday, Jan. 25, with a performance of Blind Reverend Gary Davis.

Gary Davis, born in 1896 in Lawrence County, South Carolina, is a street singer in the tradition of the wandering minstrel. By the time he was seven, he was well on his way to becoming a master of the six-string guitar. For a time he played secular songs: blues, rags, break-downs and folk tunes. His blindness, however, seems to have influenced him to turn to religion. He was ordained a minister in 1933 and has since refused to play anything but religious music. But his music is more than that. It is jazz — plain and simple.

His performances reveal the influence of the Negro spiritual and blues, combined in a unique style that runs the gamut from incredible delicacy to the drive of the gospel shouter. His music has been called "Holy Blues" and perhaps that is the best possible description of a style and technique that have become legendary in his own time.

His life has been a difficult one and it is only recently that he has achieved the fame which he so richly deserves. This slightly stooped brown man with his battered guitar, to which he refers as "Miss Gibson," has become one of the leading figures in American folk music.

His appearance at Allegheny's Last Drop will be one of the most exciting events of the college year.

Rev. Gary Davis

On Saturday afternoon he will hold a guitar workshop, followed that evening by his performance for the student body. Tickets for admission for this special occasion are available at Mr. Robert Cares' office in the C.U.

In the remaining weeks of the term, the Coffee House will be open as before. The larger room will alter neither the intimacy of the atmosphere nor the spontaneity of the songs. We hope to see you all there.

Co-ed Dormitory Living Not Forseen In Future

Co-ed dorms will not become an actuality on Allegheny's campus in the foreseeable future!

This seemed to be the consensus which came out of a "bull-session" the newly formed Student Housing Evaluation Committee held Sunday afternoon in the Alumni Lounge. The committee, made up of representatives of various social and class groups on campus, was set up to design an "ideal" residential system for Allegheny based

Building Program Steadily Advances

The construction of Carr Hall, as well as future plans for additional buildings on campus, is making progress.

Although the construction of the frame of Carr Hall was somewhat delayed by a late steel shipment, the workers will have the building ready by the Fall of '64. Having already resumed work on the frame, the workmen will shortly resume bricklaying.

The completed Carr Hall will greatly enhance Allegheny's science department. Included in the building will be five classrooms, three seminar rooms, numerous labs, a library, and a 304-seat lecture room.

The preliminary plan for Highland Hall, the proposed men's dormitory, has been approved. Since approval, the architect has been working on drawings and specifications of the general plan. The bidding for the construction of the hall will take place March 1. According to Mr. Edwards, college treasurer, the financial arrangements are as complete as possible.

There are no other concrete plans regarding future buildings. There remains hope for an additional men's dormitory by '65; however, these plans are still in the talking stage.

entirely on student opinion. A written report on the findings of this group will be presented to the Trustees of the college later in the year.

Co-ed Dorms Vetoed

The decision on the possibility of co-ed dorms was reached easily. Representatives at the meeting said students who voiced an opinion on the subject "definitely did not want" this type of housing. They felt Allegheny's campus is "too small" to accommodate co-ed dorms and that they would not be advantageous in any respect.

No decision was reached on the question "Who should live there?" Fraternity men seemed to feel that all of the seniors and sophomores should be given the opportunity to live in their respective houses. If the houses are filled up, they felt it should be up to the individual house's discretion who should occupy the houses and who should live in dormitories.

Women representatives voiced the opinion that there were many advantages to keeping freshmen women separated from the rest of the women students. Some members of the discussion group felt, however, it would be worthwhile to

NEW DINING FACILITIES for the AMDA located at 375 John St.

Men's Dining Association Now Offers Membership

February 14th will see the Allegheny Men's Dining Association (AMDA) open its new dining facilities; a project which cost over $20,000.

The new building, which replaces Klie House as the headquarters of AMDA, is located at 375 John St., across from the college tennis courts. Included in the ranch-type brick building will be a dining room accommodating 45 men, a living room, a kitchen and a recreation room.

The plan for the building was formulated by the members of AMDA last Spring. With funds collected by members of the association during the last eight years and additional money raised by present members, Cliff Gaus, president, bought a lot for the construction of the building. Construction was begun in October and has progressed rapidly since then.

The new building, which costs $13,000, will provide recreation as well as dining facilities for its members. The recreation room will include a pool table, pingpong table, and a television. There will also be adequate study facilities available to the members.

AMDA is governed by an elected board of directors. The members of the Board are Cliff Gaus, president;

John Altman, Roger Stanier, Mark Urban, Dave Newitter, and Bob Sovner. The association is incorporated under Pennsylvania law as a non-profit corporation. Members buy a fifty dollar share in the corporation when they join. This is refunded to them when they leave the association.

Anyone interested in joining the Allegheny Men's Dining Association should contact Cliff Gaus for complete details. A prospective member is usually served a meal and shown the facilities of AMDA. There is no discrimination in selection of members and any Independent man is invited to look into the possibilities of joining the club. Membership is evenly distributed among the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

Response?

It would seem singularly unfortunate that as this issue of The Campus goes to bed, we have received virtually not a single letter of either protest or support concerning the passage by AUC last week of a momentous and sweeping anti-discrimination resolution. Such a silent testimony of indifference is the worst possible indictment that a body, in this case an "intellectual community," can impose upon itself.

Much of the immediate reaction expressed by those who had attended this particular session of ASG, was that for once Allegheny had taken a strong stand on a major issue, and done so in a rare display of unanimity. The discussion was intelligent, centrally directed, and by-passed petty, distracting side issues. With unusual forthrightness, the duly elected representatives of all Allegheny students assumed for themselves and their constituency a major corporate responsibility for the abolition of racial and religious discrimination at this college. Undoubtedly the administration of the college was implicated as well, but of this we shall have more to say at a later date. For the present, however, it must not be overlooked that the prime responsibility remains with the students, for it is they who have placed themselves in a position of possibly having to radically alter the social system of the college.

Yet we cannot help but to wonder just how many Alleghenians paused long enough to ever read this resolution. We wonder further that of those who did read it how many gave it a second or even first thought. There is, rather too obviously, ample evidence of how many, or better, how few, cared to make their opinions public. And this we find the most disgraceful commentary of all upon not just the students, but the faculty as well.

Remedy

SUGGESTED TOPICS ON WHICH TO WRITE LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

1. Adequacy of the library hours.
2. The amazing swiftness which our Civil Rights resolution was passed.
3. Adequacy of Allegheny's present intellectual or athletic facilities.
4. The issues presented, supported or criticized by the feature writers or editors of The Campus.
5. Issues presented by guest speakers or other lecturers appearing on campus.
6. Public events on campus which meet with approval or disapproval.
7. The role of student government at Allegheny: Does it help or harm the student community?
8. The social groups, Lit Mag, WARC, honor system, student residence, discrimination, smoking, Senator Goldwater, Viet Nam, Panama, Uncle Tim's Fables, snow removal, etc., etc.

We know you've returned from Christmas vacation, readers. Let's hear from you. You don't have to gripe in order to say something worthwhile, so stop worrying about your social prestige and take advantage of this opportunity to express yourself.

Uncle Tim's Fables

Once upon a time, hidden far away in the deepest part of the forest, the ruling animals of the western sub-mountainal clan got together under the big oak tree for their weekly meeting. Everyone had heard rumors of the big things that were to come to pass, and whispered together in eager groups until finally the wise old owl called them all to order with an especially wise smile upon his beak.

The first controversial announcements were made by the executive animals and everyone held their breath, but the loud silence which followed only made the wise owl smile more, and under his breath whispered, "who who."

The wily fox objected that even the ruling animals were being threatened by the rival ruling body that was being terribly nasty, but everyone else agreed that a petition of all the lower animals would fix that.

"Besides," spoke up one of the important females, "the higher ruling council wants us to help them make the forest a better place for our grandchildren to live in." And a five-minute discussion was allowed for suggestions.

Finally the moment came that they'd all been waiting for. The ram got up and read with a loud voice the proclamation that henceforth they would welcome all animals into their part of the forest, no matter how curly their fur or whether or not they agreed with the bumblebee religion of the forest.

The fox jumped up and yelled, "Stop! Wait! There will be implications!" But the lion shoved him aside and said he thought it was a good idea, and the chief bear agreed that all the bears would support the proclamation, too.

Then all the other rulers jumped up and cheered and pigeons were sent to all parts of the forest so that everyone would know how kind and good were the ruling animals, because they would surely want to be that way, too. And they all scampered off to tell their friends the news, too.

MORAL: An owl that smiles may have something under his wing.

Allegheny Alum Accepts Cancer Research Post

Dr. Leonell C. Strong, an Allegheny graduate and grandfather of Wilson Strong, student counselor, and a junior at Allegheny, has recently accepted a position with the Jonas Salk Institute of Biological Studies, in California.

Dr. Strong was graduated Phi Beta Kappa with the class of 1917. Allegheny has since awarded him an honorary Doctor of Science degree, and he received his Ph.D. at Columbia University.

Now serving as Director of Biological Station at Roswell Park Memorial Institute, in Springville, N. Y., near Buffalo, Dr. Strong will move to California in February, where he will continue to work in the same line of cancer research. His research centers around the fields of gerontology, effects of aging, and genetics.

His major contribution so far has been the development of the standard research animal. The majority of the mice used for cancer experiments are from his original inbred strain. The result of continual inbreeding is ideally a genetically pure mouse. This would eliminate differences between mice and therefore limit chances for mistakes in experimental research. Dr. Strong has worked on this project for 40 years. Dr. Herbert Rhinesmith, professor of chemistry, is using mice from Dr. Strong's inbred strain in his current work.

"Fast For Freedom Food"

This year, the students of Brandeis University in Massachusetts will abstain from one meal in order to aid the families of unemployed Southern Negroes who do not receive their deserved share of state and federal aid.

The principle of operation is simple: students with prepaid meal contracts voluntarily abstain from one dinner meal; the money thus saved by the dining facility is contributed to buy food for the needy in the South.

Brandeis students call this abstention the "Fast for Freedom Food," and this year, with the joint sponsorship of the United States National Student Association, the Northern Student Movement, and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, they call on all students to join with them in this demonstration of concern.

The need for the food this year is greater than ever. It is hoped that the fast for the dinner meal on Wednesday, February 26, 1964, will be nation-wide. The program will be conducted by representatives of student organizations on campuses throughout the United States. Once again, "Fast for Freedom Food" will be distributed by Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee offices in the South.

This year, for maximum efficiency, the food will be bought from one distributor and shipped from that point through the voluntary efforts of the Teamsters Union. Therefore, a good procedure would be to provide a sign-up sheet for all those who will not eat in the dining halls on the night of the Fast. This will enable the administration to adjust their food orders accordingly. The money that the students have already paid for the meal should then be sent to the special fund. Please make checks payable to "Fast for Freedom Food," and mail to United States National Student Association, 3457 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104. This money will then be used to buy the needed food.

Musical Comedy Chosen For Theater-in-Round

Rogers and Hammerstein's musical comedy, "Me and Juliette," is now being adapted by student writers for a theatre-in-the-round production early in May. This project, unique to Allegheny, was made possible by an A.S.G. grant of $200 last spring for creative student effort in the arts.

Technical preparation for the theatre-in-the-round, which will be in the white room of the College Union, also allows for improved facilities for the "new" Coffee House. The audience will be seated on three sides of a square stage, an unorthodox design aimed to provide a more exciting contact between the audience and the actors themselves.

Norman Greene, student director, calls this musical "Rogers and Hammerstein's love song to the theatre, a song about the theatre and the people who make it live." Auditions will be held later this term for the 28 roles, and the parts will be announced before spring vacation. The script calls for three male and three female leads. Anyone interested may contact Greene.

Anita Hirsch is doing the choreography for the play, and Linda Smith will direct the chorus. John Brancato is acting as business manager for the production.

STILL SMILING despite his new cast, Nestor Caldera reflects on the situation in his native Nicaragua.

Nicaraguan Student Airs Personal Political Views

by Norman Greene

The political philosophy of Nicaragua's Nestor Caldera, here on an Allegheny Foreign Student scholarship in conjunction with the I.I.E., reflects the influence of a most unique family background.

To better understand Nestor's replies to Campus queries, it should be known that he is neither a member of Nicaragua's lower or small middle classes. Nestor's father, Odell Caldera, owns one of Nicaragua's largest department stores. Nestor's opinions are therefore colored by his leanings toward Nicaragua's Conservative Party, his high social standing and the position of the Caldera family.

Family Politics

Nestor's father's brothers are active members of the Conservative Party which opposes ex-President-dictator Luise Somoza's Liberal Party and the Liberal figurehead, President Rene Schick. The senior Caldera's cousins are also quite active in government.

However, on his maternal side, Nestor's aunt is married to a powerful member of the Liberal Party and another sister was married to a revolutionary leader who has been executed by the government. Revolutionaries are evidently thicker than thieves in Nigeria and are sponsored against the government by dissident members from the Conservative Party as well as some upperclass leaders, members from the lower and small middle classes. The last two are regarded as anti-Somoza.

While Nestor's father, soon to visit the Allegheny campus, remains outside of politics, the rest of the family, considerable in number as well as varied in residences, does not. Nicaragua's Washington Ambassador is a cousin; another cousin is Consul in Miami, uncles and aunts are scattered in Miami, New Orleans, California and there is a smattering of family throughout the U.S., Mexico, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

Alliance for Progress

Nestor has doubts as to the success of the Alliance for Progress. He said that Alliance milk, which was to have been distributed to the poor, was first labeled with Somoza's picture and then given out before an election. In this way Somoza was able to misuse the Alliance for his own political purposes.

Questioned about the political stability of his homeland, Nestor felt that since Somoza was dicta-torially omnipresent, the government was in no present danger of falling. The question was then asked, "How does Somoza maintain power?" Nestor replied that Somoza's brother, Anastasio, is head of the military. Since it was against the constitution, which is similar to the U.S.'s, for Somoza to be "elected" more than two times in a row for the 4-year-term presidency, it was necessary to find a figurehead to replace him. The chief of the military is not allowed to run for office under the Constitution; therefore, Rene Schick was hand-picked and crooked elections assured his puppet presidency.

Masses Dislike U.S.A.

America is not liked by the masses in Nicaragua because it supports Somoza's government, according to Nestor. The people were disappointed when the U.S., which was to have "supervised several elections, did not do so." Therefore, the Conservative Party asked for an OAS supervisory team, "but they did not show either." The prestige of the OAS, which is respected in Nicaragua, was hurt by its failure to act during the last elections.

Although Nestor feels that there are few Communists in Nicaragua, he stated that many University students are very much influenced by them as are some of the more militant revolutionaries. Nestor also stated that there were many active Communists in Mexico, Columbia, Venezuela, Brazil and Guatemala.

Saw Through Castro

About Mr. Castro he said, "Everyone was with him when he was in the mountains, but Nicaragua was one of the first nations to have freshmen men living in the same dorms, as upperclass men. This would put a strain on counseling and fraternity rush policies, it was realized, but some representatives felt that the upperclassmen "would assume more responsibility" if they lived with the freshmen.

Small Dorms Advocated

The advantages of "small dorm living" were strongly expressed, especially by the women members. They cited the present Highland Hall as an ideal in college housing. Most women students seem satisfied with their present living facilities in Brooks and the newly constructed Walker Annex. They did suggest, however, that the administration consider making the proposed 120-man dormitory a women's dorm. This building is scheduled to be completed within four years.

Women students who were presented with the idea of having sorority houses or more concentrated sections for the individual sororities in the dorms seemed opposed to the plan. They felt it more beneficial to live in the dorms where they wouldn't be cut off from their friends in other sororities.

Recreational Facilities

When asked by Dean John McKean, leader of the discussion, what they felt a dorm should provide in the line of intellectual, academic and recreational facilities, he was met with varied opinions.

Independent students said they felt the college should provide greater facilities for recreation and social activities in their dorms. They said their facilities were not comparable with those found in the fraternities. This was met with opposition from the fraternity representatives who stated that the fraternities bought their own recreational equipment such as televisions and pool and ping-pong tables.

Agreement was reached that the college should not purchase recreational items for the specific use of the independents.

Libraries Considered

Another member of the group suggested that libraries should be put in the dorms for reference work and leisure reading. This suggestion was discussed, but no decision was reached.

The final item considered during the two-hour session Sunday was the possibility of constructing dorms with rooms arranged into suites. Dean McKean stated that it would not be economically feasible at present to build suites for less than six or eight men. A majority of the group felt it would be nearly impossible for this many people to live so closely together and remain compatible. They decided, that single and double room situations would be more ideal.

The committee will hold its 3rd session Feb. 2 at 2 p.m. in the Alumni Lounge for the consideration of possible governmental structures in housing facilities.

Washington Bound Students Prepare For Political Semester At American U.

by Frances White

For the three Allegheny students going for a semester at American University in Washington, D. C., this past week has been spent packing and completing the course taken this term. Linda Northrup, Ruth Summers, and Andrea Strang will spend the rest of second and all of third term studying at the School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs of American U. Every year Allegheny College can send up to four students to Washington to participate in this program designed "to give the student insight into government in action."

All three girls are looking forward to this unique experience. Andrea, a political science major, feels it will prepare her to do research work on precedents and background of Congressional legislation. With political science also as her major, Linda thinks learning more about her own government will aid her in understanding her special field of interest — international relations. Ruth, who is a history major, plans to do graduate study in library science and this semester in Washington gives her the opportunity to learn about the procedures for processing the documents of the national government.

The backbone of the Washington Semester program is two specialized courses. The first, the Washington Seminar, is a series of interviews with government officials and with politicians. The purpose of these seminars is to give the student an understanding of five general areas: Congress and its staff, political parties and pressure groups, the President and the executive agencies, international relations, and the administration of justice. The second course, the Washington Semester Project, is a major research paper which is based on information gained from personal interviews and from primary source material. Andrea plans to investigate the relationship between the federal government and big business. The sale of wheat to the Soviet Union is the question Linda has decided to tackle. Ruth's topic is the processing of government documents.

Students interested in going to Washington next year should apply in October. A faculty committee selects the students on the basis of a written essay, personal interviews, and past performance. A prerequisite for participation in the program is Political Science II.

As Art Sees It by Arthur Rubinoff, '64

Ever wonder what happens to your twenty-five dollars a year activities fee? This year due to the conscientious work of John Brancato, ASG Treasurer, for the first time in memory you can find out. John, a senior economics major from DuBois, Pa., handles the activities money received from the school which totals $33,000 a year. In addition the ASG treasurer is responsible for another $20,000 generated by student organizations. The amount of work involved is no small task for there are twenty-three such organizations, and all of them warrant the tenacious attention of the energetic Mr. Brancato.

In the past years the treasurer was an illusive individual. However this year John keeps the incredible hours of seven to ten p.m. each weekday night at the ASG office where bill collectors and debtors have little difficulty contacting him. And if you cannot reach him, John will contact you through one of his comprehensive reports. So far since taking office in May, he has issued eighteen such accountings before AUC. All of these activities require a demanding amount of time, but time is of no object to the talented Mr. Brancato if he can improve the system of administering the students' money or of keeping records of transactions exercised on their behalf. When he returned to school this fall John spent over two weeks revising the entire system of recording and keeping records with Mr. Robert M. Power, the student government's certified public accountant.

The result of such sacrificing efforts have been fruitful for all Allegheny students. Instead of operating as treasurer with only a checkbook and a receipt book as was done in the past, John has added five different varieties of journals and a comprehensive ledger. Furthermore he permits all of these records to be open for public inspection, and he has devised a new system to prevent embezzlement. In addition our industrious treasurer implemented the Air Force accounting system to meet student government's needs.

The product of all these improvements have meant great savings to Allegheny students. By working more closely with the college auditor, treasurer and business manager, as well as Mr. Power, John recovered $400 in unclaimed accounts; negotiated a ten per cent discount for ASG at the bookstore; secured a sizeable rebate for the sophomore class, and more than quadrupled the amount of money ASG earns through interest.

Even more to his credit John has made the position of ASG treasurer more than a mere functionary. He has been a vital participant in this year's constructive student government by taking an active part in executive board and in AUC. As chairman of the finance committee he has kept the leadership of all campus organizations aware of their fiscal obligations for the future as well as the present. And on top of this incredible amount of responsibility, John, a student assistant for the economics department, found time to conduct the informative interview with Professor John D. Henderson on deficit financing that appeared in The Campus last term.

All of these accomplishments are certainly impressive, and that is why I have taken this space to share my appreciation and inform the student body what a remarkable individual is looking out for their interest for the nominal "salary" of $100 a year. The reader may well wonder what will happen to the position of ASG treasurer when John Brancato attends law school next year before embarking on a career as a tax attorney. But John, who possesses unusual foresight has taken care of that aspect too, for he has devised a comprehensive training program for his successor, Ethelyn Foley, to enable his improvements to be enjoyed by future generations of Alleghenians.

break relations with Cuba (even before the U.S.) and allowed Cuban exiles to be trained within her boundaries." Nestor feels the Cuban Economic Minister Chè Guevrara is worse than Castor. He further commented, "The Russians don't like Castor too much."

Nestor could not say very much concerning the need for reform in his country. He allowed that the land is owned by very few, that there were many poor tenant farmers, a larger lower class than either middle or upper classes, and that much U.S. aid was lost to corrupt officials. Nestor cited a strong anti-Communist Catholic Church deeply rooted in the government and society as a redeeming factor.

He knows little about President Johnson, but stated that President Kennedy was liked much better than "Mr. Ike, who was hated for his interference within Nicaragua."

Broken Foot

Nestor is studying in American schools for the fourth time; he was previously enrolled at South Georgia College, University of Miami, and Adelphi College, and is a pre-engineering student. He will soon be joined in this country by a 16-year-old brother and both plan to continue their studies in the U.S. next year.

Currently he may be seen hobbling around with a shiny new cast on his foot, which he broke last Saturday.

Brooks Exhibit Features Toshiko Takaezu's Art

An exhibit of pottery and textiles by Toshiko Takaezu will be on display in the Pine Room of Brooks Hall from Jan. 23 through Feb. 22.

Miss Takaezu is one of the leading potters in the United States today. She was born in Honolulu, receiving her early training in art at the Potter's Guild, and under Claude Horan at the University of Hawaii. She admired the work of Maiji Grotell, and traveled to the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., to study under her, eventually becoming her assistant.

Miss Takaezu has taught ceramics, beginning design, and integrated arts at the University of Wisconsin. She spent 1955-1956 in Japan, where she lived in a Zen temple and worked with Japanese potters. At present, she is the head of the Ceramics Department of the Cleveland Institute of Art.

The extensive list of exhibits in which her pottery has been shown and her representation in outstanding collections are testimony to her eminence in the art of pottery today.

As is true of much modern art, Miss Takaezu's pottery and textiles salute the past while at the same time they express the present. Their contemporary spirit is shown by their strength in simplicity, the originality and daring of the forms, the preference for an ornamental quality which is an integral part of the form and the material rather than an applied decoration.

Respect for the past is seen in her understanding of the spirit of invention, the technical mastery, and respect for materials, which underlie the greatest eras of the potter's art, rather than the imitation of specific styles or effects.

LARGE AUDIENCE visited the ASG meeting last Tuesday to discuss Civil Rights resolution.

AFS Committee Furthers Field Service

During first term, the idea was initiated to form an American Field Service returnee organization here at Allegheny. It was instigated due to the fact that there are about 16 returnees here on campus plus many others interested in the AFS program. The group will have many jobs, two of which are, setting up AFS chapters in area high schools which don't already participate in AFS, and screening candidates for bus trip chaperonage. We would like to encourage anyone who has some basic qualifications and lots of interest to apply for these positions.

Every summer AFS foreign students who have spent a year here studying, take a bus trip through various parts of the United States. College students are needed to chaperone these groups on the bus trip and sightseeing expeditions. If you are interested in applying, please contact Dana Burnett, chairman of the committee, or any AFS returnee.

We also are very interested in having more students on the committee. If you are interested in AFS activities and in promoting its growth through joining the committee, contact Dana, or an AFS returnee.

Activities

The Student Activities Committee of ASG is considering new members. Application forms are available at South and Brooks desks. Please return completed forms to Brooks desk or give them to John Quattrocchi.

Gators Lose Three Games Hold 1-4 Record In League

In a game, which was somewhat reminiscent of the Thiel game back in December, the Allegheny Gators went down to defeat at the hands of Washington and Jefferson, 59-49. As against Thiel, the Gators played basketball for one half the contest but that was not enough against the Presidents. W&J could not get going in the first half as the Gators played an excellent defensive game, especially Ray Maness who did a fine job in

The second half was a different story as W&J began to do a little better against the Gator zone defense, led by the outside shooting of Rich Banchansky. At the same time the Gator offense completely fell apart as they failed repeatedly to set up any semblance of an organized offense.

Allegheny was led in the low scoring ball game by Dave Spencer with 14 points, 10 of which he scored in the first half. Ray Maness was the only other Gator in double figures with two field goals and 8 of 9 free throws for 12 points. The remaining Gators managed to hit for a total of 23 points against the W&J defense, which is labeled second in the nation for small colleges.

Eastern Michigan

Allegheny opened a two night visit to Michigan by dropping an 87-72 decision to Eastern Michigan University at Ypsilanti, in their first road encounter Friday night. The Hurons of E.M.U. featured a seemingly disorganized but effective offense. The Hurons were able to get off 96 shots due to the fact that they controlled the boards, 80-57. The Gators never led in the game although occasionally they cut the Hurons' lead to as few as 4 points and stayed very much in the ball game until the closing minutes.

The game followed pretty much the same pattern throughout. First, Eastern Michigan would open up a 10 or 15 point lead by getting 4 or 5 shots underneath the basket until they finally put the ball in the hoop. Then the Gators would stage a comeback, successfully executing their offense, but consistently would lose their drive and fall far behind.

Unfortunately much of the time Allegheny could not work its patterns and relied on long shots from the outside. The officials were of little help to the Gators as frequent violations and questionable fouls were called on Allegheny to the delight of the Huron fans.

Ray Maness and Dave Spencer were the only Gators to hit double figures as Maness had 25 points on 8 field goals and 10 free throws, for the highest total by an Allegheny player so far this season. Spencer had 13 points, 11 in the first half, as he sat out most of the second half in foul trouble.

Wayne State

In another P.A.C. encounter the Tartars of Wayne State slid by the Gators 71-62. Allegheny met Wayne on a night when it seemed the Tartars couldn't miss from the field or the foul line. Actually the Gators outscored Wayne 26-25 in field goals but lost the game at the foul line as the Tartars were given many many more chances to make their 21 free throws than Allegheny to make their 10.

John Willett played his best game of the season, scoring 16 points and frequently stealing the ball from the Tartar guards. For most of the game Allegheny trailed by a substantial margin until, with 1 minute left, they brought the score to 66-60 by means of their full-court press. It was felt by members of the Gator team that Eastern Michigan was a far superior team to Wayne State, and that if they had played as well against Wayne as they had Friday night, they would have defeated the Tartars.

IFC League Shows Good Competition

I.F.C. basketball got off to its start last week with Phi Kappa Psi, Alpha Chi Rho, Phi Gamma Delta, and the Independents snaring victories. This leaves these four teams tied for first place going into this week's hardwood action.

The Phi Psis had to fight back a determined Theta Chi team led by Don "Moir" Souders for their 34 to 29 victory. "Moir" was the high scorer for the game with ten points, but he was closely followed by the Phi Psis' Howard Hutton with nine markers.

The Crows rolled over the Phi Deltas in their Tuesday night 35 to 22 win. Pete Durst pumped in 12 points for the Crows and Bob Arms helped the Phi Deltas' cause with ten points. It was an easy victory for one of the pre-season favorites.

It was a close game for three quarters, but in the fourth frame the Phi Gams pulled away from the Deltas for a 44 to 34 victory. Kurt Porschen poured in 18 markers for the losers, and Henry McCauley pumped in ten points for the Phi Gams.

The Independents threw up a strong offense and defense in the second half to hand the Sigs a 46 to 25 defeat. The Indies held the Sigs to one point in the third period and six in the final canto while they were racking up 22 markers. Von-Rock led the Indies with 13 points and Bill Dean dropped in seven for the losers.

Action will continue this week on Tuesday night and then again on Thursday evening. Game time is 7 o'clock.

International Exchanges

Baldwin 1-4, behind the scoring of Jim New and Bill Tomson, outclassed Cafilisch 4 — 46-37. New, putting in 15 points for the winning cause, and Tomson, 14 points, dominated play for the winners. Baldwin controlled the backboards also, as Tomson and Don Hickernell pulled in the rebounds. Cafilisch was hurt when Jim Austin fouled out in the first period. Bill Orellana and Bob Ferguson turned in commendable jobs for the losers.

Aquamen Drop Contest To Powerful Grove City

The Allegheny College Aquamen absorbed their first defeat of the season last Thursday as they went down 60-35 before a powerful Grove City tide.

Dave Ludwick, '65, with a win in the 100 yard free-style and Dave Olson, '67, with a victory in the 500 yard free-style were the only Gator first of the afternoon.

Seconds were registered by Quin Powell, '67, in the 50 yard free-style, Craig Toedtman, '66, in the 200 yard individual medley, Wayne Wolfram, '67, in the 200 yard butterfly, Jim Zeeb, '67, in the 200 yard backstroke, and Toedtman again in the 200 yard breaststroke.

Allegheny's swimmers now sport a record of two wins against one loss and meet Wayne State this Saturday in their next contest.
