Miss Ida M. Tarbell,
120 East 19th Street,
New York City.

My dear Miss Tarbell:-

I am enclosing herewith a print of another Lincoln photograph that I have, in the hope that it may prove of some interest to you. I have seen another, I think, in one of your own books of the same three persons, namely, Pinkerton, Lincoln and McClernand. I think, however, this print differs slightly in the poses of the three men. It may be a print of which you are entirely familiar and it may be of no value whatever.

The picture does, however, have a very interesting history, or at least a history that I take to be the fact inasmuch as it was given to me by a man whose veracity I have no occasion to doubt, namely, Mr. A. L. Dickerman. Mr. Dickerman's father was the owner of a part of the field upon which the battle of Antietam was fought. After the battle this particular print that I have was found by Mr. Dickerman's father in the possession of a dead Union soldier and it has been in the family ever since.

Inasmuch as it is framed behind glass, I have never taken the same apart to see whether it is an original photograph, print or what not, but I would assume it is a print.

My object in sending it to you is, of course, that it may be of some interest to you and that there is a bare possibility of it being a variation of another picture of very similar nature.

With best wishes to yourself.

Very sincerely yours,
