Letter to Ainsley: I have decided to give myself in writing & women. But to carry out this intention, it is necessary that your wife should know the truth, & that the wall of lies behind which we each both stood be swept away. Especially must your wife know that after your "confession" you returned to me with the same ardour as before & that when in the midst of our heart rent- you left Bradilla & again at Chartres the love through that took place) the mist was shamefully demoyed by
