February 12, 1936

Dear Mr. McClure:

I have not answered your letter of February seventh earlier because I have not been at all sure about my movements and I am still uncertain. Sara is ill and in the Bridgeport Hospital and I am going up Saturday to see her. It may seem wise for me to stay there for a few days. In that case I would not be able to be here on the seventeenth - the day you set for your birthday celebration. I should be distressed to miss it, but if you have received acceptances from Miss Rosebore and Mr. Phillips you three better go ahead and then you can all tell me about it later

It is fine of you, dear Mr. McClure, to want us and if I cannot congratulate you at the luncheon on your birthday I shall be doing it wherever I am.

Faithfully yours

Mr. S. S. McClure
