Dear Mrs Tarbell;

Several years ago
I was fortunate in hearing the monologue "He knew Lincoln" broadcast on that great statesman's birthday. At that time it made an indelible impression on me and since then I have made numerous attempts to determine the author and if possible to obtain a copy of the work.

Recently, while scanning a copy of Cosmopolitan in a doctor's waiting room, I came across your article on Simola and discovered the object of my admiration was a product of your pen.

I take the liberty of addressing this note to you of Cosmopolitan, in hopes that you will advise me as to where I might obtain a copy of

"He knew Lincoln" for myself.

Sincerely yours.
