Dear Mrs. Tarbell:

I have read with a great deal of interest the first section of your story about Florida and because I lived through the period you have referred to in which the great and enterprising men lived and operated, I am wondering if you have overlooked the fact that in later years there have been some other men of importance who have confidence in Florida and who have invested a great deal of money there under difficult conditions which have nevertheless contributed in recent years to the great growth of the State and increase of population.

I think no other man in recent years has done more than Mr. S. Davies Warfield, President of the Seaboard Air Line Railway. I am not going to recite his activities because the facts are available and I am sure you know where to obtain them in a much better way than I am able to relate them.

Very truly yours,
