London, Sept. 10, 91.

My dear Miss Isabel,

I must find time to write a word of thanks for your postal card with its kind offer of aid to a stranger in a strange land.

I should certainly take advantage of your offer and go directly to you for advice. We are going to follow out our earlier plan and go first to Paris. But we have now decided to go from here to Antwerp, Brussels, Cologne - down the Rhine to Mayence and Frankfort - and thence directly to Dresden - There we shall stay four or five months doing our German study, unless we should find the great number of Americans there detrimental to our success - in which case, we shall try Stuttgart or Leipsic. Then in February or March if all is well, we will go either to Geneva or Lausanne for French, and be in Paris if possible through the month of June when the Champs Elysées will be in their glory.

I hope you will also be in Paris at that time, and I may have the pleasure of hearing your Bohemian lyrics which I should think would be great fun, to say nothing of its profitableness.

Thanking you again for your kind offer, and with kind regards to Mrs Henderson, I am

Very sincerely yours
Lucia O. Fuller.
