Dear Mr. Erskine:

I am glad enough that the Authors Club has seen fit to change its constitution to admit women. That means, I take it, that the members have come to the conclusion that we have earned the recognition. That pleases me. I have always believed it the creditable way to secure the so-called "rights."

Of course, I am proud to be nominated as the first woman member and shall be glad to have my name put before the Admissions Committee.

Faithfully yours
