Dear Dr. Schleisinger:

I came back to town yesterday to find fifty galleys waiting me. I am enclosing twenty and will keep them going now regularly.

Am I straining at a gnat in objecting to the word "new" in the second line? It seems to me that what had developed were unexpected modifications of forces as old as society.

Again in that same paragraph I do not like the use of the word "explortations." There was plenty of it of course. Is not "expansion" the more precise word?

Very sincerely

Dr. A. M. Schleisinger
