

Consumers Can Trust Sellers

The consumer has so little control in the economic set-up because he gets so little. He assumes no responsibility but takes all he can get.

Since sellers were in retail since 1875 every year had to be on duty as long as a purchaser was awake.*