QUOTATIONS FROM OTHER BOOKS BY BARTON

Barton's first writings were in 1890 - Badly told stories of South.

1892-4-5-7 He wrote only church essays and addresses

1898 - A history of himself "Inquest of an Ancestor" whom he found was an Englishman and had fought the Americans at Lexington and Bunker Hill.

1900 - More about his family a story or two and church addresses.

1901-3-5-7-13-16 Bible stories and addresses

1920 - Addresses on George Washington and Abraham Lincoln
"The Books that made Lincoln" - "Books about Lincoln"
"The Soul" "The Paternity" etc. - On Theodore Roosevelt -

1922 - Life of Clara Barton (To whom he apparently was not related)

1923 - "Parables of Safed the Sage" (Signing himself Safed the Sage)

1925 - A Life of Lincoln - (Adding more scandals to the honored name of his parents and grandparents and repeating many of the scandals he published in his former books)

FROM A BOOK ENTITLED "IN THE HILLS OF KENTUCKY"

1890

"Im as morril a man furter preach as ever you seed I rekon."
"I like fun as well as any man livin I reken but Im a might feller fur law'n order"

"Now my brethren Ive heerd that thers jest 666 different denominations and I tell you thet 665 er thim is wrong and the un thet haint wrong is the ole harshell baptists"

From His Church Addresses from 1901 to 1920

"He reckoned himself to be not a whit behind the very chiefest of the apostles"

"He that is unjust let him be unjust still...I am the Appha and Omega the first and last the beginning and end"!

1920 From his address on George Washington

"The history of George Washington by the Rev. Mason Weems has nothing to recommend it and in some respects deserves the mirthful scorn with which it has come to be regarded...Yet before it is entirely laughed out of court let it be remembered that it was published by a minister who knew him well and it met with apparent approval by Washington's relatives and friends."

In 1930 He began his first money making books. These were all on Abraham Lincoln

(These were as a whole collections of forgotten and disproved scandals)

From his first address given in his own church

"Abraham Lincoln loved Ann Rutledge...proposed to Mary Owens and married Mary Todd...Abraham Lincoln and his wife were both superstitious...such is common to frontier life....
(On the last page he made up the creed of Abraham Lincoln saying)
"No liberty is taken with the sentences except to change the past tense to present...plural to singular...and preface the words 'I believe'."

From "The Books that made Lincoln"

"No I've read enough of it" said Abraham Lincoln "Its like all the others. Biographies as generally written are not only misleading but false"

From "Books About Lincoln" by Barton

"Across the title page under the name of the author some one had written in pencil 'The Champion Liar of History'" Barton comments "I do not think Mr. Lincoln did this, but had he lived he would have found other books about himself worthy of the comment," (We would recommend all of Bartons)

"Forbear to raise the devil unless you are sure you can lay him"

1922 He wrote a life of Clara Barton to whom he was not related apparently.

1923 He wrote the "Parables of Safed the Sage" signing himself in the preface #Safed the Sage"

From the last page by Safed theSage (Barton)

From the Story of "The Large Firecracker"

"I have seen men spreading themselves like green bay trees and determined to make more than their neighbors, and to do things that the neighbors could not surpass...several times I had occasion to look round to find these same people ..and Lo...they could not be found..."

"They had fired their big cracker and blown up with it."

1925 This was his life of Abraham Lincoln.

Advertised ahead by many leading newspapers in the country, but when carefully read contains not one word of proof of a "new" and much advertised scandal about the grandmother of Abraham Lincoln.
