My dear Mrs. Meiere:

Will you permit me to say how set up I felt by your talk last night at the Friendship Dinner. Particularly was I delighted with your pointing out that women in the painting field have done things before, did not have to wait until the twentieth century to do notable work. It is an old thesis of mine and when I dared to first bring it out in the heat of a suffrage campaign some thirty years ago you can imagine how much it was welcome. All you said was sound and right as I see things.

I would have liked the chance to tell you this before I left the dinner so as not to trouble you with this note, but things were so confused somehow I was hustled out and into a taxi before I quite knew where I was.

Thanking you for your fine sensible talk, believe me

Very sincerely yours
