ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE, MEADVILLE, PA., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER

The question of how to keep up the interest of the alumnus is one of vital importance to every institution and particularly so to small colleges, whose very existence is threatened by the creation of large and heavily endowed institutions. To quote from our president, "The wealth of a college is in its alumni," yet in the case of Allegheny this wealth has not been treasured up as it should be.

To Harvard University is due the credit of having put into execution a project which seems admirably adapted to this end. We refer to the Harvard Graduates' Magazine, the initial number of which has just been issued, and may be found on the library table. It is a journal for the alumnus. Besides articles written by graduates on topics taken from college and university life, it gives a record of the daily life of the college side by side with the doings of alumni. There are letters from the secretaries of various classes, accounts of class banquets and reunions and notices of prominent alumni, so that a graduate of several years' standing, instead of finding that he has been forgotten and that the columns of his college paper record only the doings of undergraduates, learns what his old classmates are doing, renews the ties of college days, feels that once a Harvard man always a Harvard man, and takes a very lively interest in the prosperity of his college.

There is a real need for a journal of this kind. The average college paper has but a small fraction of the alumni on its subscription list, and does little to keep alive the interest of graduates. In a few years the alumnus finds that the paper records the actions of men unknown to him. Unfamiliar names fill its pages, while the men whom he knew as classmates are scarcely ever mentioned. The college paper exists only for the present, it is of little interest to those outside of college life, and for very sufficient reasons. In the first place, the chronicle of the marriages, deaths, reverses or successes of alumni is not of sufficient interest to undergraduates to warrant giving it the space which, in the opinion of graduates, it deserves. The college paper cannot cater to the wants of the two classes. What is important to the alumnus is of slight interest to the student, and vice versa. Further, the editors of the college paper are men who have been in college but a few years, and know almost nothing of the men who have gone before. They cannot pick up interesting bits of news about alumni, they do not even know their names, and cannot be blamed if they fail to fill their columns with matter hard to get and of comparatively little interest to the majority of their readers. It is quite clear that it is not the place of the paper to keep alive the graduate's interest in his college. How shall this be done?

It is scarcely practicable for every college to follow Harvard's example and publish a sumptuous magazine for its graduates, but something of the kind might be done on a smaller scale. We would suggest the issuing of an annual pamphlet which would tell in brief the history of the college and its graduates for the past year. It might contain a digest of the president's report to the board of trustees, giving the financial standing of the college and the record of its progress in the various departments for the year. Then considerable space should be devoted to the alumni department. Its editor would naturally be the man who had been longest connected with the college, and co-operating with resident graduates he could secure from the daily press many items of interest about the sons and daughters of Allegheny. By corresponding with members of various classes further data could be obtained and a very full record made of the doings of the graduates for the twelvemonth. Each class might elect a permanent secretary, whose duty it would be to collect all possible information about the members of his or her class and send it to the alumni editor.

Such a publication would not trench upon the province of the regular paper, but would occupy a field of its own. If properly conducted it would be of much interest to every graduate, and its subscription list would include nearly the whole body of alumni. We commend the plan to the consideration of the powers that be, and hope by next Commencement to have the pleasure of reviewing Vol. 1, No. 1, of The Allegheny Alumni Register, or whatever it may be called.

With the modesty which is an invaluable characteristic of editors, we have hitherto refrained from saying anything about the new dress of type in which the CAMPUS makes its appearance this year. From cover to cover there is a complete change, and in the opinion of a few, a change for the better.

The old cut which adorned the front cover page was chiefly valuable as a souvenir. It had been nailed together and mended and planed down and raised up so many times that its days of effective service were over, and it has been replaced by a more modern design. The main portion of the paper is in a type a size smaller than that previously used, thus giving nearly one-third more matter in the same number of pages. This necessitates considerable hustling to fill the columns, but we do not shrink from the task. The large type in the editorial pages was retained not out of consideration for the small children to whom they are adapted, nor that there might be as little editorial matter as possible, but for a reason not for publication.

Jesting aside, the CAMPUS in typographical appearance is better than it has been for years, and its editors take pride in the fact that competent judges pronounce it a tastefully gotten-up periodical.

The study of logic is not difficult, the application of it to the practical affairs of life is so rare as to deserve special mention. To give an example, we have all known from our copy book days that "In unity there is strength." Further, ever since we have been in college we have known that the non-frat. is deprived of many advantages which fraternity men enjoy. The social side of college life is practically closed to him; in the political field he is the tool of one faction after another, and gets little or nothing in the race for honors. Although the barbarians outnumber all the fraternity men together, yet for years they have failed to secure anything like fair representation in class or society elections.

We are not finding fault with this condition nor attempting to excuse it, for there are reasons why it has existed; we are simply putting the case as it is. For years this state of things has been a discouragement to the non-frat., yet while the premises were plain to all, drawing the conclusion has been left until this year.

On a bright morning a few days ago, twenty-seven students, from all classes, marched into chapel wearing badges of white ribbon which bore in letters of gold the emblem A. C. C. B. It meant that the solvent particles had been precipitated, that the logical conclusion had been reached, and the non-fraternity element had combined for mutual benefit and defence.

The Allegheny College Christian Brotherhood has very sufficient reasons for its existence. It proposes to secure an equitable division of college honors and to furnish social privileges to a class to which they have been denied. It will form a nucleus around which the power of the barbarian ranks can concentrate itself and act as a unit. The members have secured a suite of rooms over Easterwood's and will have reception parlors, a game room, and all other conveniences of a fraternity hall.

The society is open to all non-frats. of good standing, and its advent will certainly mark a change in certain aspects of college life.

It is idle to speculate as to its permanency, or the possibility that it may eventually secure a charter from some fraternity. It is here, it has a definite purpose to accomplish, and if rightly managed and not allowed to become merely a political organization nor to come under the control of any clique, it may prove of lasting benefit.

What part examinations should hold in college work has been a vexed question so long that it must certainly be in a very bad humor by this time, unless being vexed has a different effect upon a question than upon the mortals who discuss it. It would certainly be a presumptous sin for us to attempt to discuss such a weighty matter, but in the way of submitting evidence we would like to call the attention of the other professors to the methods pursued by Dr. Wheeler with his class in Moral Philosophy. On account of his increased work in the spring term the Doctor was not able to hear the class daily, as had been the custom, but could only hold two recitations a week. This necessitated lengthening the lessons quite materially, for as much ground was gone over as formerly; hence it was almost impossible to determine from the recitations whether the members of the class were doing the required work or not. The long lessons and irregular recitations were very apt to lead the students to neglect their work. Knowing as they did that no class room work was required by their teacher, they often went into the recitations unprepared, trusting to a few days' cramming to bring them through the final examination.

And so it went for the first week. But a surprise was in store for the students who counted upon getting off easily. A series of examinations was held, one being given every two weeks throughout the term. The chapters gone over by the class were made the subject of an exhaustive written test. To pass this, it was necessary to have a very full knowledge of the text, and as the entire book was gone over in this way it compelled every student to do some honest work, and we feel safe in saying that never before did one of Dr. Wheeler's classes know so much about the subject under consideration.

In this case the plan was a success; with other teachers, using different methods, it might not prove as good as the old way. But we offer it for what it is worth—with the usual reduction for cash.

The Letter.

"Going to him? Happy letter! Tell him—
Tell him the page I didn't write;
Tell him I only said the syntax
And left the verb and the pronoun out;
Tell him just how the fingers hurried,
Then how they waded, slow, slow, slow;
And then you wished you had eyes in your pages,
So you could see what moved them so.

"Tell him it wasn't a practiced writer,
You guessed, from the way the sentence toiled;
You could hear the bodice tug, behind you,
As if it held but the might of a child;
You almost pitied it, you, it worked so.
Tell him—No, you may quibble there,
For it would split his heart to know it,
And then you and I were silenter.

"Tell him night finished before we finished,
And the old clock kept neighing 'day!'
And you got sleepy and begged to be ended—
What could it hinder so, to say?
Tell him just how she sealed you, cautious,
But if he ask where you are hid
Until to-morrow—happy letter!
Gesture, coquette, and shake your head!"

—Emily Dickinson.

With Slippers On.

"Put on thy slippers, then I'll talk to thee."

NUMBER TWO.

This time it was the Dictionary Man who shook the persimmon tree, or in other words provoked the wrath of the Unhappy One. He had been reading a volume of Census Reports—he grew fat on such diet—and came loaded up with statistics about our country's greatness, ending his boasting with the remark: "We are a great people, and if there are a few unsightly gargoyles on the mighty cathedral of civilization, why, we are young yet."

The Unhappy One looked at him a moment, as if to give warning, and then began slowly: "There are several arguments, or rather excuses, which deserve an honorable retirement—if not a pension for length of service—and this is one of them. We hear too much about the youth of our country as an excuse for its shortcomings. Our faulty municipal administration and the evils of our political system are accounted for under the false logic of our youth; anarchy and lynchings are excused as growing pains. In the name of the Pilgrim Fathers, when does a country cease being young? I admit that the life of a nation is not measured by the same standard as the lives of its people, but when our country has been known for three hundred years and has had a national life for more than a century, doesn't it seem rather ridiculous to speak of it as an infant in arms and say that its squalling and destructiveness must be excused on account of its tender years?

"It is a peculiar fact that this excuse is never mentioned save in justification of our errors. If Foot-ball in every form has been prohibited by the University of Heidelberg, Germany. They draw the line at duelling and will permit nothing more dangerous to students.—Ex.

This is supposed to be the explanation of the fact that so much information can be found in our colleges: the Freshman brings in a good supply of knowledge and the Senior takes none of it out.—Ex.

The Faculty of Leland Stanford, Jr., University has demanded the resignation of the entire editorial board of the Palo Alto, the University monthly magazine, on account of certain articles published in it.

The yell of the North Dakota University is decidedly western, being composed of the universal Indian shout and the Sioux war-cry: "Odx-Dzo-Dzi! Ki-Ri-Ri! Hi y-ah! North Dakota! Sioux war cry!"—Ex.

Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., takes great interest in athletics. They have seventeen tennis courts on the campus. The Freshman class has lately erected a grand stand with a seating capacity of 150. The girls made the awning for the same.—Gates Index.

How about the following for Allegheny: At Boston University the faculty have voted to permit work on the college paper to count as hours work in the course, allowing seven hours per week to the managing editor and two hours to each of his assistants.—Ex.

The students of Oberlin are not to be outwitted in their struggle for a new gymnasium. Negotiations are now being made for the running of a hotel at the World's Fair, at Chicago, to raise funds for the purpose of erecting a gymnasium. This is certainly a noble undertaking, and the best wishes of every college in the land are with the boys of Oberlin in their unique enterprise. It is to be hoped that Allegheny may not be compelled to follow the example.

The United States of America has something to be justly proud of in the fact that she is the only country in the world which spends more money upon education than upon war or preparation for war.

We are glad to say that with few exceptions our former exchange list is full to date. It is evident, from the promptness with which these exchanges reach us, that there is a general move forward all along the line in college journalism.

Cornell is surely gaining a national if not a world-wide reputation for training some of America's best teachers and scholars. The new Leland Stanford, Jr., University, of California, has sixteen Cornell graduates in its faculty.

A Freshman knows everything; he has explored the universe and has proved all things. A Sophomore has the wisdom of an owl, but like that sedate bird, keeps still about it. A Junior knows a little, but begins to be a little doubtful about it. A Senior knows nothing.—Syracusan.

The Chancellor of the Nebraska Wesleyan Unisity has announced that there will be no fraternities organized in the university. He gives as his reasons for this stand that all fraternities are a menace to literary societies.—Carltonia.

Does this reasoning apply in any way to Allegheny?

Students may do well to read the following: "Every student intending to pursue a college course should by all means join a literary society. It is in the literary work of these organizations that we put into use the learning acquired by the study of the class-room, One of the most important characteristics of an educated and refined personæ should be the absolute ease and grace of manner, the ability to impart the brilliancy of intellect to others in a fascinating, yet unaffected manner, and the practice afforded by the society work is certainly a great help in the acquisition "of address, man, address."—The Hesperus.

From the diary of the Business Manager:

"I had a dream the other night
While everything was still.
I dreamed that each subscriber
Came up and paid his bill."—Ex.

Judging by the space allotted to the discussion of athletics, and especially to foot ball, in the columns of our list of exchanges, it would seem that upon comparison Allegheny is rather in the background in this respect. Foot ball is the game of the season and we should not be behind colleges of lower standing in regard to this standard game. Let us have a foot ball team!

FOR LITTLE MEN.

One day Napoleon was searching for a book in his library at Malmaison, and at last discovered it on a high shelf, quite beyond his reach. "Permit me to get it for you, sire," said a marshal of the empire who towered above everyone in the room. "I am higher than your majesty." "You are only longer, marshal," replied the emperor with a frown.—Ex.

The following from the Pacific Pharos explains itself:

LICK OBSERVATORY, August 1, 1892.

"DEAR SIR: There is absolutely nothing to be said about our Mars observations from night to night, or about our observations of the whole year, even, until the work has been gone over carefully and a map made of our results, which will take till October next, at least. If there is anything to say, I will telegraph you, of course. All, or nearly all, of the present excitement about Mars is manufactured and sham excitement, as useless to the people in general as it is harmful to true science. Exaggerated and ignorant expectations will not be realized—such as relate to communications with the inhabitants of a planet which we are not absolutely certain is fit to be inhabited (let alone actually populated), for example—and the general public will eventually be disappointed and science will be blamed if it encourages hopes which every competent person knows cannot, at present, be realized. It is therefore my business to tell you frankly what I have, and not to lend the great name of the Lick observatory to a mere sensation. When any one asks us a question, we reply; but we are not responsible for what is written and printed unless we sign it.

(Signed) EDWARD S. HOLDEN."

Other fraternities may take warning from Delta Kappa Epsilon in her recent deplorable act of killing an initiate at Yale College while undergoing the terrible ordeal of a college fraternity initiation. The coroner's jury in the case rendered a verdict censuring the students in their mode of conducting the initiation and recommending that the faculty either abolish such initiations or limit them to reasonable bounds.

I HAVE been entirely CURED of CONSUMPTION by the use of Piso's Cure. The doctors said I could not live until Fall. That was one year ago. Now I am well and hearty and able to do a hard day's work.—Mrs. LAURA E. PATTERSON, Newton, Iowa, June 20, 1892.

I SUFFERED with CATARRH for years, and tried all kinds of medicines. None of them did me any good. At last I was induced to try Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. I have used one package and am now entirely cured.—PHILIP LANCREY, Fieldon, Illinois, June 22, 1892.

The list of college dailies has been increased by the appearance of a new paper called the Daily Palo Alto of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, the first number of which was published on Monday, Sept. 19. The students of this infant institution are showing the greatest energy in all college matters, and do not seem disposed to be behind any of the eastern colleges in the matter of journalism. —Syracusan.

A Stayer.—Miss Gasket (at 11:30 p. m.): Do you know, Mr. Sappy, I am sure you would make an excellent editor of a rural newspaper.

Sappy (pleased)—Weally, now, Miss Gasket?

Miss Gasket—Indeed, I do. Your motto seems to be, "I have come to stay."—Detroit Free Press.

Western Journalism.—Western Editor: Any news to-day?

Reporter—No, sir; nothing happening.

Editor—Well, take my six-shooter and go out and make something happen.—Ex.

any one were to say that our country is too young to govern itself, that it is not old enough to go to war, that it needs a guardian over its national affairs, his words would be met with derision. Yet this is the logical conclusion we are driven to accept. If we are entitled to a child's immunity from blame, we should expect a child's restrictions. On the other hand, if we admit that we have arrived at our majority; if, as all agree, we merit praise for our achievements, we cannot escape blame for our neglect. We are accountable for our faults as truly as any nation of Europe, and the sooner we realize this, and stop talking about our country as if it were an irresponsible infant, the sooner we will remedy our shortcomings and no longer have occasion to seek weak excuses for them." Then he glanced at the Dictionary Man, who was painfully silent.

There is this disadvantage about such superlatively good talkers as the Unhappy One, they keep making paragraphs in the conversation. When a subject is started, they take it up and say absolutely all there is to be said, so that when they have made an end, the conversation must stop till a new topic is found. What sport would it be to hunt with a man who was such a marksman that he would bring down the fox the moment it was started by the hounds? One would lose all the sport of the chase with such a fellow. But fortunately the Poet had not yet been silenced; he moved uneasily and made some preliminary noises as though he wanted very much to speak, but felt that the present moment was hardly propitious.

"Well," the Unhappy One said, observing his indecision, "you have a sort of he-won't-be-happy-till-he-says-it air; what do you want? Out with it, whatever it is, it can't be worse than the idiotic vagaries of the Dictionary Man."

This was not very encouraging to the Poet, but he grasped at the straw and said, "I have something here that I'd like to have your opinion upon. I feel sort of uncertain about it; don't know whether"—

"Oh, never mind about that. We know you've written something and you're bound to read it anyhow; spare us the usual preface about 'submitting it to our critical judgments' and all that."

With this he stretched himself back in his easy chair. The Poet read, in what Howells would call a wind-harp stop, the following fragment:

A VISION.

And at first I saw a child at play upon the shore. He built up walls of sand, and was gay, and he cried, "To-morrow I shall watch the tide come in and wash over my walls of sand; I will see the white foam curl around them, and I will be happy." Then my eyes were closed. * * *

And I looked again, and a youth walked forth beneath the stars; he lifted up his voice and sang: "To-morrow I shall be with my beloved; lip to lip, heart to heart, we shall meet; to-morrow I shall be happy." Again my eyes were closed, but I heard a voice saying, "It is still beyond."

* * * * * * * *

Once more I looked, and I beheld a man going forth to battle. Stern was his face, but in his heart was a smile, and to himself he whispered: "I go forth to victory; to-morrow I shall return and many captives shall follow my chariot; the people will cry out and set the laurel upon my brow, and to-morrow I shall be happy." And my eyes were closed, but again I heard the voice say: "It is still beyond." * * * *

And I saw a lonely figure in a desert. Far had he gone, bent was he with age, dim was the light in his eyes. He sank down upon the plain. Death came and beckoned to him, and as he rose to follow, he said: "I go to dwell with the gods: I will wake in the other world, and to-morrow I shall be happy." And again the voice spake: "It is still beyond. Shall this last fail too?" And I wept, for I could not answer.

Rev. G. W. Corey '90, and Miss Fisher, of Bolivar N. Y., were united in marriage Wednesday, Oct. 19. As they passed through here Thursday a large number of friends met them and tendered congratulations.

What weather!

Wait till you see the drum major's suit.

Every one have his picture taken for the World's Fair.

Robert Darragh spent Sunday at his home in Beaver.

S. E. Rodkey, of the class of '95, who is preaching at Banksville, was with us for a few days last week.

James Campbell has been in attendance at the Y. M. C. A. Convention at Philadelphia for the past few days.

The battalion has now reached the required number to support a drum corps. Still, about fifteen more men would meet with the approval of all should they join.

Things must be coming to a sad state at Hulings. Several of the young ladies are in the habit of taking cleavers, bread-knives, hatchets, etc., from the kitchen to their rooms at night for protection.

All the members of the ball club are very much pleased at the manly and honest manner in which Manager Darragh has conducted himself in his relations with the club. Outside clubs also have a good word for "Bob."

The democrats are trying to make as good a showing in the city as the republicans. Their parade Friday night was very good, but we notice that they can't get enough men in college to form a democratic marching club.

There is one little matter we would like to call the attention of the trustees to, and that is the unpleasantness of having the campus and drill grounds used for pasturing cows. The students don't approve it and probably won't stand it long before doing something.

Oliver Gornell is spending a few days with friends here.

Prof. T. to Mr. Swearer, in German, "How many feet has a monkey?" Swearer—"Ich habe zwei Füsse."

Mr. Geo. B. Anderson, who has been ill for the past few weeks, is convalescent and will enter college next term.

There is a copy of a new magazine in the library called The College Fraternity. It will be worth your time to look it over.

Dr. Fields, who has been with us for the past few years, will sail for Germany in about two weeks, where he will pursue a course of study.

A town lady remarked, the other day, that she knew it was a Christian organization over Easterwood's store by the amount of noise they made.

The Dau Sima Dalda boys of the High School celebrated their first anniversary Friday evening, in an appropriate and pleasant way at Trowbridge's.

Prof. J.—"Dr., I am dead in love." "Well, why don't you marry?" "Can't." "Won't she have you?" "She? Who said anything about a she? It's myself I'm in love with."

Dr. Wheeler made some very fitting remarks Saturday morning in memory of the late Joseph Horne, of Pittsburgh. Mr. Horne was a well known and highly respected man and his loss is deeply felt.

The base ball club played in hard luck at Franklin. The boys lost their nerve in the second inning, and from that on, though some fine plays were made, the playing was decidely careless and the game was lost.

The A. C. C. B. gave their opening reception in their rooms in the Dreutline Block Thursday evening. After a short literary programme the evening was passed with games, etc. Refreshments were served at Trowbridge's. It was a very enjoyable affair.

Are you going home to vote?

Miss Rich, of Cattaraugus, visited Miss Moench recently.

Miss Minnie Byerly spent Sabbath at her home in Sharpsville.

Miss Jessie Moore visited with friends in Cambridge over Sabbath.

Items of general interest will be gladly received from any person by the local editors.

Stillson probably holds the record on grasshopper stories. At any rate the members of the biology class think so.

Mrs. Campbell, of Kane, Pa., stopped over night at the Hall en route to New Castle, Pa., to attend a W. C. T. U. convention.

Mr. Geo. Grant was awarded the first prize for having the most gas to fill a soap bubble with at the reception. Mr. Bennett Porter carried off the booby prize.

Miss Carlisle, State Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., while here visiting the association of Hulings Hall, gave a short address at the college prayer meeting Wednesday evening.

Eve: "Addy, dear, I want to go shopping. Can you let me have a hundred dollars?" Adam: "Great heavens, Eve, you seem to believe the report that I am made of dust."

A band of wandering musicians were around serenading Thursday evening. The same night mysterious white figures supposed to be ghosts were seen gliding about on the campus.

Mr. P., enjoying himself in the company of a young lady in the southern part of town about 11 p. m., "Why, my foot has actually gone to sleep." "Happy foot!" said she in envious tones.

The officers of the Allegheny College Christian Brotherhood are as follows: President, E. P. Harper; Vice President, R. H. Wolf; Secretary, G. W. Bird; Treasurer, G. L. Cary; Corresponding Secretary, Horace McKinney.

Wanted: A bid from three ladies' fraternities.

Several students ate roast ox at Conneaut Lake last week.

The social event of the year will be given on—but we mustn't tell till later.

Thanks to Dr. Hamnett, the chapel is kept comfortably warm these mornings.

Following the CAMPUS' advice, the young ladies of Hulings gave a reception last week.

Miss Marion Howe, ex-'95, left Tuesday for Baltimore, where she will spend some months.

Rosabel Morrison, the talented young actress, daughter of Louis Morrison, will play "The Danger Signal" at the Academy of Music Nov. 4.

The College Y. M. C. A. is raising funds to furnish the west wing of Bentley as a reading room. Why not give them the use of the library, and thus have it kept open in the afternoon?

The following officers were elected by Ossoli Society for the ensuing term: President, Miss Howard; Vice President, Miss Mount; Recording Secretary, Miss Frisbee; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Edson; Treasurer, Miss Scott; Critics, Misses Gageby and Bascom; Sergeant-at-Arms, Miss Rose.

The Hulings Hall reception under the management of the Y. W. C. A. was a very pleasant event. The parlors were nicely decorated, the numbers on the programme well executed and the punch (?) soon disappeared. Blowing soap-bubbles was the principal amusement and reminded us of our younger days. Mrs. Laffer, Miss Lattin, Miss Coe, Mr. Staples and Mr. Swearer were on the reception committee.

Fraternity.

Phi Kappa Psi entertained their lady friends very pleasantly at their home on Highland avenue, the 12th inst. Music by Miller's.

The Kappa Kappa Gamma's initiated Miss Nutt recently.

Clark Boynton and Ernest Faber wear the Sigma Alpha Epsilon pin.

A. L. Porter was initiated into the mysteries of Phi Kappa Psi, Monday evening, October 10.

Alphi Chi Omega is keeping up the record, having recently initiated the Misses Foote, Evans and Sherred.

Mr. T. A. Douthitt, as delegate from Penna. Delta chapter of Phi Delta Theta, attended the Alpha Province convention, held at Burlington, Vt., last week.

It is early to speak of a Pan-Hellenic banquet, but let us all make up our minds that we will have one, and then when the time comes it will not take long to make preparation.

Phi Delta Theta will undoubtedly celebrate on the coming election, the candidates for President on the Republican ticket and for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket being Phi Delta Thetas.

Alumni.

W. H. Corrin, '88, was in town a few days ago.

C. H. Luse, '92, is teaching in south-western Penna.

E. E. Proper, '89, took his A. M. at Harvard recently.

C. A. Peffer, '92, has a good position with Horton, Crary & Co.

W. C. Leffingwell, '92, is teaching in one of Ohio's prominent towns.

Geo. S. Ray, '92, is attending the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania.

F. H. Sisley, '92, is canvassing in Saginaw, Mich., where he has been during the summer.

H. W. Rand, '92, is draughting in Pittsburgh, Pa.

V. L. Johnson, '92, is teaching in Jamestown, Pa.

D. L. McNees, '92, is on the editorial staff of the Beaver Times.

Fred Trumper, '92, is running a surveying gang at Elk Horn, W. Va.

Harry Cotton, '92, who made such a good record at Homestead, is now resting for a while at his home in this city.

H. B. Byers, '91, after a few days visit with friends here, departed October 18th for Chicago, where he is now located.

Frank W. Black, '92, has been distinguishing himself this summer as a ball player. He is now at his home in Bruin, Pa.

Fred C. Howe, '89, who holds the degree of Ph. D. from Johns Hopkins, returns to that university this fall to pursue special studies.

May we its spirit never lose;
Christ for young men, a Savior, guide and friend,
A fit companion, faithful to the end.

Next Sunday, October 30, will be observed as a day of prayer for the Student Volunteer Movement.

Mr. Jas. Campbell represented our Association at the State Convention held at Germantown, October 13-16.

The average expenses of the students at Yale last year were: Freshmen, $786.96; sophomores, $831.34; juniors, $883.11; seniors, $919.70. The largest expense reported was $2,908.—Ex.

Three Workers' Bible Training Classes were organized last week. For the present they will all meet on Monday, from 12 to 1 o'clock.

At a recent business meeting, the committee which had been appointed to estimate the cost of furnishing the west wing of Bentley Hall for the use of the Association, was instructed to solicit subscriptions for the amount necessary. The committee is already at work and it is encouraging to note the ready response being made by the boys. The room now used by the Association will be fixed up and retained as our meeting room, while the lower room, the one formerly Prof. Dutton's recitation room, will be divided into two rooms, the first for a parlor and reading room and the other for a committee room, office, etc. The cost for carpet, paper, chairs, curtains, organ, etc., has been estimated at three hundred and fifty dollars. We invite every man in college to contribute. Give whatever you can, however large or small. We also extend the invitation to our Alumni and friends. Prof. W. A. Elliott, Cor. Sec'y, will acknowledge any subscriptions sent to him.

The Quarto-Centennial Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the new building of the Germantown Branch of the Philadelphia Association. Although not yet finished, the building drew expressions of wonder and admiration from every one of the 439 delegates representing their respective branches of the work. When completed the building will contain every comfort and appliance known to Christian workers, and cost $125,000.

At the first session Mr. Geo. P. Hukill, of Oil City, a member of Allegheny's Board of Directors, was unanimously chosen permanent chairman. After the usual preliminary business the delegates settled down to the work for which they had been sent. Friday and Saturday were spent by the majority earnestly seeking the means to improve themselves and their associations, but most of all how to reach and win for Christ the young men of our state.

The addresses by men prominent both in religious and business life testified to the wisdom of the State committee's selections. The first address after the welcome was delivered by Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D., of Brooklyn, and certainly did not fail to stir the hearts of its hearers to renewed energy and more earnest endeavors. Mr. James McCormick, of Harrisburg, conducted the Bible Study and on Saturday morning this was followed by a beautiful and simple talk from Mr. Suitor, M. P., of the Oxford, England, Association. But the session most interesting to college men was the one Saturday evening in the home of Rev. Chas. Wood. Before refreshments the eighty-nine college delegates, led by Mr. Gilbert Beaver, spent an hour discussing and advising methods peculiar to college work, and then adjourning to the dining hall showed Rev. Wood how college men can appreciate their host's hospitality.
