

Six Best Sellers

A Review of the Season's Most Popular Books Subject At Last Quill Club Meeting.

"The Six Best Sellers" was the topic for consideration by the members of the Quill club at the meeting of that organization held in the main library room on last Monday evening. After a brief and unimportant business session, Mr. Lewis opened the discussion by telling just what the best sellers were. The reports from the publishers vary and in different parts of the country different books are the favorites. Accordingly six of the best selling books were reviewed by as many members and after each review an open discussion was called for.

Miss Pratt read Miss Murray's paper on "John Marvel, Assistant," the latest book of Thomas Nelson Page. Mr. Hughes, then read a paper on "A Certain Rich Man," a wonderful book by William Allen White. This work seemed to be better known among those present. Dr. Smith talked at considerable length about the book and its author, dealing mainly with the most common criticisms of his style. He said that the book had been called by some "the American novel," though there was room for doubt on this point, but good reason to expect that some day, this author might bring forth something worthy of this appellation.

Myrtle Reed was then given some severe criticism after Miss Rowley had reviewed her latest effort, "Old Rose and Silver," and had read several passages from the book. Professor Armstrong, when the discussion was called for, arose and made a talk, denouncing the works of this author as "such stuff as dreams are made of." He said that he had made her acquaintance for the first time about a week ago, when, feeling ill and having heard much of her he ventured to take down "The Master's Violin." After reading about one-third of the book he had not had the good fortune to meet a single character giving the slightest intimation of having any of the attributes of a living person and realizing this fact and the fact that he was growing sicker, he laid the volume back on the shelf. Mr. Lewis, who had charge of the program, then made an appeal for someone to champion the cause of the fair writer, but there was no response. However, there was one in the gathering who had a feeling of pity, if nothing else, for poor Myrtle. Later in the evening, Mr. LaBounty, having occasion to speak opened his remarks by saying that his feelings had been sorely offended by the way in which Myrtle Reed was criticised. Although he had never read one of her works he felt that such books as these had their place in the world of literature just as any others have.

Miss Hillman read a review of "Truxton King," by George Barr McCutcheon, the prolific novelist and author of "Graustark." After this Mr. Mead spoke of the book saying that it was good for its kind. The program was made complete by the reading of a review of "The Callings of Dan Matthews," by Mr. C. White. The book is the latest publication of Harry Bell Wright, the author of "That Printer at Udell's."

The meeting was a very good one in that it brought before the eyes of the club the latest books showing their good and bad points. It was the sentiment of the evening that "A Certain Rich Man" is the most sincere work in recent worths.

RECOGNITION TO FORMER ALLEGHENY STUDENT.

In the Christmas Number of the Saturday Evening Post was a contribution from the pen of Frank Wilbur Main, of Pittsburg, entitled, "Prescribing for Sick Business." Mr. Main was a student at Allegheny in 1900, going from here to New York City where in 1904 he was granted the degree of his profession by the State of New York. He is a certified bank accountant, and considered one of the best in his profession. In addition to his regular work, Mr. Main has charge of the accounting courses in the University of Pittsburg.

Oberlin Won By One Point

Allegheny Basketball Team Defeated 21 to 20 By Strong Ohio Team—The Story of the Game

To nothing but hard luck can the loss of a game of basket ball to the Oberlin team at Oberlin on last Saturday night be attributed, for a score of 21 to 20 plainly indicates that the team was not out-classed. It was purely hard luck.

It takes the score of a lost game longer time to travel home than one of a game won. Generally, the score of basket ball games reaches home in rumors or otherwise on the night of the game—late perhaps, but everyone knows it the next morning. However, in the case of the Oberlin game no word was had from the team until the Sunday papers came out and shortly after this followed the story of the game from the players' own lips.

The team had a long trip, getting in Oberlin after a trolley ride, about two-hours before the game was called. The train had been about two hours late leaving Meadville and hence late in making the connection in Erie.

The two teams were evenly matched from the start and at no time did one have a great lead over the other. At the close of the first half the Allegheny team led by three points, the score being 17 to 14. During the second half the Oberlin five overtook their opponents and when there was yet about two minutes to play the score stood 21 to 20 in Oberlin's favor. A foul was then called on one of the Oberlin men. If Allegheny had made the basket, the score would have been tied. Needless to say, Captain Baker was in a quandry to know what to do in this last chance to tie the score. Weldler had tried the last foul but had been favored with no better success than the Captain; so Hawk was given the ball for the try. The ball seemed to be in as great a state of indecision as anyone and accordingly rolled about the rim of the basket for a period of time which seemed to the players five minutes, and then twisted itself out and onto the floor. Hawk had failed as the others had, and the game was lost.

The Oberlin team is one of the best teams, if not the best team, in Ohio. Last year they tied with Ohio State University for the championship of Ohio and this year the team is identically the same as last. All of which means that it was no disgrace for the Allegheny team to have been beaten there by a margin of one point.

The line-up and summary follow:

AN AUTOGRAPH LETTER.

A very interesting and valuable memento has been secured for the college through the efforts of Dr. Crawford while in Pittsburg, Monday. It is an autograph letter of John Wesley, written in 1765 from London to a Miss Peggy Dale connected with the orphanage at Newcastle-on-Tyne. The college is indebted to Mr. Durbin Horne, former president of the board of trustees, for the gift of this letter of such historic interest.

The letter occupies about one-half of a frame eight inches long by sixteen inches high, the other half being filled with a steel engraving of John Wesley. The frame is of ebony and both front and back are covered with glass, so that the address on the letter can be read and the postmark, as well as the rate, two pence.

WHAT SCORES SAY.

It is an item of interest in connection with the work of the basket ball team this season and in particular in connection with the score in the Rochester-Allegheny game, to note that the same Rochester team which beat Allegheny two weeks ago by a margin of five points, beat the team from the University of Pennsylvania on last Saturday by a margin of twelve points, the score standing 29 to 17 at the end of the game. It is also remarkable that the Penn game was played on a neutral floor, the Rochester Armory, while the Allegheny game was played on Rochester's own floor—their own gymnasium in which they always practice. If anything at all can be judged from these comparative scores this seems to indicate that Allegheny would have no trouble with the Penn team.

A REQUEST.

Allegheny has held a place of honor among the colleges of North America for the last three years in missionary giving. The highest point of achievement was reached in the school year of 1908-9 when $500 was pledged. It was this record that won recognition at Rochester. All of that money is not yet paid. Shall Allegheny College go on record before the colleges of North America as not paying pledges in full? If you have not yet paid your subscription the committee requests that you do so as soon as possible.

Kaldron Affair

A Compromise Plan is Expected to Pass at College Council Meeting This Afternoon.

The main outlines of the compromise plan for the selection of the entire Kaldron Board as well as of the managers of the Campus and Literary Monthly has been worked out by the faculty committee, consisting of Professors Smith, Lee and Coburn. Several unimportant modifications may be made before it is adopted by the College Council, Saturday afternoon, but the general scheme will doubtless remain unchanged. This compromise has the unusual virtue of being entirely satisfactory to all parties concerned and almost devoid of objectionable features. Briefly stated the plan is as follows:

All students and professors paying fifty cents will be eligible to vote indirectly for the Kaldron board. This fee will be used as an advance payment to count as seventy-five cents on the subscription price of the Kaldron. The election will be held in the following manner. The Editor-in-Chief of the Campus and of the Literary Monthly, with the head of the English Department and two faculty members elected by the College Council, will act as an Executive Committee, receive the fees and nominate fifteen persons for an Electoral Board. These fifteen names will be arranged by the committee in five groups of three each, so as to eliminate entirely all party lines. One person is to be elected from each group. This Electoral Board will then choose the Kaldron board.

The election for this year will probably be held some time in the near future, possibly next week. Hereafter the election will be held early in November.

The Electoral Board to select the managers of the Campus and "Lit" will be elected in the spring at a separate election. The compensation of the managers of all three publications is unsettled as yet as also is the question of whether the payment of one fee shall make a person eligible to vote at both elections. The number of Kaldron editors to be selected and the point concerning single or dual managerships are other undecided features.

THE NEW RULES.

Quill Club Votes in Favor of Proposed Changes in Campus Constitution.

At the meeting of the Quill Club, Monday evening, the committee which has been working on a revised constitution for Campus competition reported its recommendations in the shape of a new constitution. The Quill Club recommended, that the constitution be adopted by the College Council to go into effect at the beginning of the second semester. If this is done the competition for 1909-10 will be judged under two systems, the old for the first semester and the new for the second semester. As this was also done last year no serious confusion is looked for.

The new constitution is by far the best ever drafted and combines the good points of previous constitutions without incorporating any of the undesirable features. In addition to this the experience and practice of other college papers has been heeded in the composition of the board of editors. Briefly stated, the new features of the constitution are as follows:

The editorial board is to be composed of an Editor-in-Chief, an Assistant Editor and three Associate Editors. These are supplemented by a staff of four reporters. Competition is to be judged not only from the quality and quantity of manuscript material submitted for publication, but also from the quality and quantity of material published. The Editor-in-Chief is to be required to turn over each week manuscript material not available for future publication and three marked copies of the Campus to a designated member of the committee in charge of competition. Each competitor for the position of Editor-in-Chief must see at least one weekly edition of the Campus through the press on his own responsibility. A copy of this number is to be submitted to the judges for consideration.

Cleveland Stars

Ohio Collegian Team Will Meet Allegheny Here Tonight. Splendid Record of the Visitors.

It is expected that the basket ball game in the gymnasium this evening with the Cleveland Collegians will be the best home game in years. The Collegians are a team from the Central Y. M. C. A. of Cleveland, and most of them have played on college and university teams. The team is expected to leave Cleveland at 1:00 P. M., arriving here at 5:25.

The Cleveland team has made a good reputation for itself during the several years of its existence. The Collegians are at present the basket ball champions of Cleveland. Last year they played nine games on their own floor, winning all of them. Fourteen games were played on foreign floors and of these ten were won and four lost. This makes four games lost out of nineteen played—a good piece of work for one season. They scored 885 points while their opponents made 436.

Thus far this season the team has met and defeated some good teams. They have played twelve games, winning ten and losing two, the latter being on strange floors. In fact all of these games were played away from home except three and these resulted decidedly in favor of the Collegians. The scores show that so far the Collegians have made 507 points to their opponents 255. Here are the games:

Collegians, 99; Pirates 10.
Collegians, 41; Baldwin-Wallace University, 11.
Collegians, 17; Buffalo Germans, 45.
Collegians, 36; Hiram College, 18.
Collegians, 52; Broadway Y. M. C. A., 26.
Collegians, 18; Kenton, O., (after noon) 23.
Collegians, 39; Kenton, O., (evening) 13.

NEWS, OR STALE NEWS?

"Stale" news is usually avoided in journalism of all kinds, but if there is an exception it should be the college paper. The student who "knows all there is in the paper" before it is published, is not criticizing the publication adversely, but indulging in a little self-gratification—which is desirable. It is hoped that the reports of club meetings, Forum, Mission Study classes, Y. M. C. A. and some others will be "stale" news in this sense to most who read them. The greater the number here who "know it before it is published," the bigger Allegheny will be.

A QUESTION ANSWERED—YES!

Does Allegheny appreciate its basket ball team?
When Rochester defeated U. of P. on a neutral floor last week, a desire immediately took possession of the student body to bring the winners here at any price. Nearly every man in the college signed a petition to the athletic board asking it to schedule Rochester at Meadville. That involved a raise in the reserved seat and admission prices, and there were hardly enough tickets to go around at the higher price. The result is, Rochester is coming.

The Oberlin Review for January 19, says, regarding the game last Saturday at Oberlin: "Allegheny has always had a reputation of turning out a wonderful basket ball team, and the five who faced our men Saturday evening did not fall below the standard set by other Allegheny teams for playing a hard aggressive game. It would be impossible to say that either team outplayed the other." That is a tribute to our team from the other side that should find a response here.

A WELCOME SETTLEMENT.

Those who have been watching the much talked of Kaldron affair during the last few months will welcome the new compromise settlement as outlined in another column of this issue. There is no reason why it should not be the means of providing Allegheny with better year books than we have had in the past. The feature to be especially commended is the fact that no party lines are recognized. The selection of the five persons to nominate the Kaldron board must be on merit. And it is safe to say that those so selected will realize that they have been given a trust, and that they must rise above any party or class. The regulation of the manager-ships of the Campus and the Literary Monthly, which will probably be included in the Kaldron action, is as worthy as the Kaldron matter itself.

Two questions which must be decided are, first, the number of faculty members to be included in the first committee, and second, the percent of profit the manager be allowed to keep. While neither is a vital issue, the same fairness should be evident in their settlement as has been so evident in the making of the plan.

THE REAL SYSTEM.

At this time of the school year, the papers and magazines which come from other colleges and universities are devoting much space to the "honor system." Some schools which have used it before point to its success in past examinations, and urge its continuance in letter and in spirit. Some, which are to try it for the first time, are still doubtful. Taking the view point of the school papers the sentiment is in its favor.

The system has never been introduced at Allegheny because those in charge of the examinations do not believe it necessary. We know of no other school where students are trusted as they are here. And is not that an honor system in itself?

The so-called "honor system" is not an appeal to honor; it is a law reinforced by a penalty. The ideal "honor system" is the one used here. The student who will do anything to harm that ideal has failed to measure up to the Allegheny standard.

STUDENT VOLUNTEER CONVENTION.

Two of Allegheny's Representatives at Rochester Tell the Story of the Meeting.

It is possible to say without fear of exaggeration that the Student Volunteer Convention which met at Rochester, N. Y., from December 28th to January 2nd, was the most remarkable student gathering of a college generation. The statistics of the convention show that 722 colleges and universities were represented by 2,678 students, and 329 teachers and professors. This gathering represented the pick of the student body of North America gathered from 49 states and provinces.

A glimpse at the array of convention speakers will give a faint idea of the scope of the problems presented to the student delegates. John R. Mott, Robert E. Speer, Ambassador James Bryce, Arthur J. Brown, Dean Bosworth, of Oberlin, Bishop McDowell, Bishop Hartzell, Mr. A. E. Marling, of New York City and Samuel W. Zwemer, of Arabia, were but a few of the noteworthy names represented. No program was published, yet every session found the hall crowded long before the time for opening and no session disappointed the expectations of those who were fortunate enough to secure admittance.

That missions is no subject for weaklings, that the Student Volunteer Movement calls for the best manhood and womanhood of the colleges of our land were but a few of the impressions especially emphasized. Since the Nashville convention 1,275 volunteers have sailed, but many more must sail within the next quadrennium if the motto and ideal of the movement, "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation," is to be realized. "Never before," stated Mr. Mott, and he was supported by Ambassador Bryce as well as by first hand students of the world situation, "has there been such a synchronization of crisis; the whole heathen world is changing and is now open to Christian influences."

In spite of the deep earnestness and the unflinching determination manifested there was no trace of fanaticism, no endeavor to sway the delegates by appealing to their emotions. The whole matter of missionary service was presented in the same cool and clear manner that a business proposition would be. More than that, the gathering was not as much missionary in spirit as devotion. First and foremost must Christ be recognized as Lord and Master in the life of every Christian, then a decision can be reached concerning a life work. Christianity must be made to influence the colleges in the home land before it can ever move the world. Last of all, every side of missionary life, its hardships as well as blessings were presented. Every student was warned not to be influenced by the attractiveness of missionary work or on the other hand to be drawn to the work through a love of martyrdom. Perils must be faced, galling hardships endured, and finally, perhaps a martyr's death be met.

The immediately visible results of the convention were to be seen in the seriousness and thoughtfulness of the delegates, in the deeply devotional character of the convention sessions and in the interest shown in the afternoon conferences dealing with manifold topics. Even the daily press of the city of Rochester, as well as the citizens themselves noticed this feature more than any other. But in the last analysis, the final estimate of the influence of the convention will come from its effect upon the colleges of North America in their awakening consciousness of the import of the Student Volunteer Movement and in the manner in which they respond to this vision.

As reported in last week's Campus, Allegheny received public recognition at the convention. Three names of former Allegheny students appear in the roster of sailed volunteers for the last four years, Henry B. Mansell, William Millward and Mrs. Edith Marlatt Allen.

Furthermore, R. P. Andrews, '07, and W. L. Morgan, '10, were delegates from Boston Theological School; M. J. Lick, '08, a delegate from the University of Pennsylvania, and P. N. Taylor, ex-'11, from Drew Theological Seminary, thus showing that Allegheny is everywhere recognized as a missionary leader and as a school has a reputation to sustain in the missionary world.

Once in each college quadrennium, a student generation, there is held a convention in the interest of foreign missions. The gathering in Rochester, N. Y., on December 29th, is considered to have been the most important of the series. General direction is assumed by the Y. M. C. A., but in co-operation are the evangelical churches of North America, all the mission boards, the Young People's societies of the continent, the religious press and hundreds of missionaries on furlough. It is a marvelously effective organization of immeasurable power.

The master mind of the Student Volunteer Movement is John R. Mott, a leader as resourceful, magnetic and inspiring as an entire bench of bishops. He said in the executive report, "as a result of the activities of this movement more students today have lost themselves in the great cause of Christ than at any previous time. It has dealt a powerful blow to some of the gravest perils of modern student life, the perils of selfishness, of narrowness, of materialism and worldly ideals, of extravagance and love of ease."

At Rochester there were present 3,000 students and professors from 722 institutions. It was shown that since the Nashville Convention of 1906, 1,275 volunteers had gone to the foreign field; $130,000 a year is given by the colleges to the work, and the mission study classes had grown from 1,049 to 2,084, enrollment from 12,629 to 25,208. The most notable feature of the recent meeting was the constant attitude of the delegate body in its deep devotional spirit, in its intense earnestness and in its complete commitment to the cause it had espoused. There was no display of emotional enthusiasm, but in the songs and scripture responses of the assembly there sounded a note of faith and high purpose that never can be lost.

Before this audience of students were laid the religious needs of the world, expert missionary testimony from every land, searching spiritual messages touching personal life and the crisis of opportunity and responsibility now at hand for the evangelization of the world.

There were ten great sessions during the five days in the convention hall, which was generously provided by the Rochester Chamber of Commerce. In addition, forty-five sectional conferences were held on three afternoons. Every detail of the various meetings was planned with utmost care. Yet even in such a protracted season of privilege, a few occasions were of outstanding moment. One of these was the address on Thursday night of the Hon. James Bryce, the representative of the Court of St. James to the United States. Mr. Mott introduced him as "a fellow student and distinguished teacher, the ambassador of Great Britain and an ambassador of Jesus Christ."

The English statesman made a ringing and powerful appeal that the gospel be sent speedily to the non-Christian peoples. He said, since our material civilization has rooted out the old ways of life in distant lands, we are bound to implant a new and better faith in them.

But the pinnacle of the convention came on the closing Sunday night. There were scores of cablegrams from the whole world round, the sacred roll of those who had given life itself in far away regions during the quadrennium and the confident, conquering band of ninety-two volunteers from

COLLEGE NEWS ITEMS.

Captain Hines, of the track team, requests the assistance of all the college men in laying out a cinder track around the new athletic field Monday morning.

An institute of the High School teachers of science and mathematics of Western Pennsylvania was held in Wilcox Hall last Saturday. Mr. Webb had charge of the meetings. Dinner was served in Cochran Hall at noon by Mr. Bave.

The Scientific and German Clubs met in their rooms Tuesday evening, and interesting programs were presented at both. The paper at the former was by Mr. R. H. Uhlinger, and was entitled "Chemical Valence." The annual banquet will be held Tuesday evening at Cochran Hall.

A new Sunday school has been organized at the Reisinger schoolhouse, Baldwin street, under the direction of the neighborhood work department of the Y. M. C. A. Rodney Mosier, '13, is superintendent and William Dotterer, '13, assistant superintendent.

A Student Volunteer Band was organized after the Mission Study Class Thursday evening. Interest in this phase of the religious life of the college has been on the wane for some little time past but it is the intention of the Volunteers to be more active in the future. Henry S. Leitzel is the leader.

Local college people have received the program for the annual meeting of the Association of College Presidents, held at Delaware, O., on January 20 and 21. President W. H. Crawford, of Allegheny College, will be one of the speakers, delivering the introductory address on Thursday evening. Dr. Crawford is president of the Association.

The final meeting for the semester of the Mission Study class was held Thursday evening. Dr. Smith reviewed the last chapter of Gale's Korea, and then spoke briefly of Allegheny's responsibility along missionary lines because of long past and of recent achievements, emphasizing the importance of the Swearer Fund. Several brief talks were made by members of the class in a similar strain.

Since the beginning of the second term several new students have registered in the college with the result that the total enrollment is now up to 232. Most of the additions are from Meadville High School and it is certain that more from that source will be enrolled at the beginning of the second semester. It is thought that the number will go over 340. The enrollment is already more than at any time last year.

The Senior class was entertained on Monday evening at the Phi Kappa Psi house, the hosts being the six Senior men who are members of the local chapter of that fraternity. The invitations were for a Poverty Party, and the guests were attired in keeping with the event. Charades, shadow pictures and other stunts helped to entertain the guests. Late in the evening an appetizing lunch was served at an improvised lunch counter.

College friends of Coach Rickey will be interested to learn that he has just been elected as coach of the base ball team of the University of Michigan for the coming season. When at Allegheny, Coach Rickey had charge of the foot ball and base ball teams here. He was a splendid base ball player, being for some time a member of the St. Louis Americans and later of the New York team, of the same league. He was coach of athletics for a number of years at Ohio Wesleyan University.

Rev. H. B. Hamilton, a missionary from North China, met over thirty men and women interested in missions, for an informal conference at the Library last Saturday evening. Rev. Hamilton was in Meadville in the interests of the Pittsburgh Convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement and is a personal friend of John R. Mott, at whose request he arranged to meet the students of Allegheny. He was much impressed with the missionary interest manifested in the college.

The current number of the Outlook contains the first of a series of five articles on the subject of "Industrial Peace in Europe," this week's article being called "The Peaceful Revolution," by Frederick C. Howe, class of 1889, who is now practicing law in Cleveland. Mr. Howe is one of the prominent Allegheny men in civic life, having made himself famous through certain reforms he headed in Cleveland. He is a forceful and interesting writer and speaker, and his many friends will note the articles with pleasure.

A postponed meeting of the Classical Club was held in the Library Tuesday evening. Miss Strickland gave the review of an article in a current periodical and Mr. Robinson reported various items of interest to classical students which have been printed in recent magazines. The principal paper of the evening, by Broadbent on "The Imagery of Aeschylus" was productive of a lively discussion. A regular meeting of the club will be held next Tuesday evening when Miss Beebe will read a paper on "The Religious Views of Aeschylus."

A small, but interested, attendance made the Forum meeting Thursday afternoon profitable and exciting. Owing to the absence of the regularly scheduled negative leaders, Limber and Hillman were selected to oppose the affirmative team, and won by a margin of one vote. In accordance with the policy of the Forum, Professor Armstrong and C. F. Lewis, a member of last year's varsity debating team, were called on for talks. There will be a list of available material kept in the Forum room hereafter and steps will be taken to collect all the material in the Library for the use of the debaters.

The cast for "She Stoops to Conquer" will not regularly begin rehearsals until after the examinations are over, but the men chosen for the several parts are already studying and when rehearsals are called, will be expected to be familiar with the lines and "business." The interruption caused by the examinations will shorten the time for rehearsing to about five weeks since the first performance is to be at the Academy of Music on March 17. In the announcement of the cast in the last issue of the Campus an oversight was made in the omission of the part of "Stingo" which was awarded to Mr. Riblet.

CLEVELAND STARS.

Collegians, 46; Ohio Wesleyan University, 15.

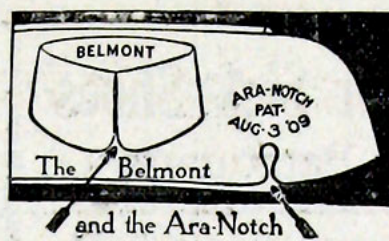

Collegians, 31; Bellevue, O., 27.

Collegians, 16; Alliance All-Stars, 15.

Collegians, 40; Broadway Y. M. C. A., 31.

The Collegians expect to line up in this way: Schardt (Capt.), center; R. Peckinpaugh and Wenger, forwards; Smith and Ziegler, guards. They are bringing as substitutes, Wilson, Cohen, Blair and Sheekley. All of the men are big and most of them have had wide experience in the game. Captain Schardt, who weighs 190 and is six feet, three inches in height, has played on different teams in and about Cleveland for seven years and has become known as one of the best foul shooters in the city and among the best centers in that vicinity. Peckinpaugh, left forward, is an all-round athlete having been picked for the all-city scholastic teams in football base ball and basket ball for several years. He played basket ball with the East High team for three years and since then has played with city teams. Wenger, a six footer, playing right forward, has played for six years on high school and club teams. Smith, the left guard, has played for eight years being at Central High School five years and since then playing with the Case (Brown and White) team, Ohio State University and Columbia University. Ziegler, the other guard is another six footer and has had wide experience on teams about Cleveland, among them, the Nationals, who were the city champions in 1906-7. He played on the Case football team for four years and captained it for one year. Wilson, who may be in at guard played for seven years at Hiram and since then has been on club teams. Blair, the substitute center, played with Hiram for two years, captaining the team last year. With this array of men the game gives promise of being full of interest.

In the Allegheny line-up there is apt to be some change. Maxwell has been playing at guard during the practice of the past week and it is thought that he and Leffel or Phillips will begin the game at guard, while the forwards will be Baker and Weidler. Hawk will play center.

At the mystic hour of ten o'clock on last Friday night the co-eds of the dignified class of 1910 gathered in the Y. W. C. A. room of Hulings Hall. Each one was dressed in a grotesque manner representing her thesis. Greek poets and dramatists gayly conversed on scientific subjects with mathematical sharks. After each one had sacrificed a page of her literary effort to the fire of the propitious gods, refreshments were served.

colleges all over America, which testified to its purpose to fill up the ranks in 1910 and push the conquest for Christ on every field. A multitude of lives in those five days dwelt upon a Mount of Vision. The highest ideals of Christian experience and service received a new reality. The consequences of the convention are beyond human calculation. The issue is in the hands of God.

Allegheny made a commendable showing in the report of the Executive Committee. Its gifts to the Swearer Fund for Korea, was placed at $500 with an enrollment of 315 students. This compared creditably with Ohio Wesleyan's $603, and 1,286 students, and Syracuse University, with $501 and 3,300 students. In the number of volunteers, however, Allegheny is far behind Wooster, Hiram, and Washington and Jefferson.
