HALLOWE'EN PARTY AT HULINGS HALL

A DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL EVENT.

Young Ladies at the Dormitory Entertain in Their Accustomed Charming Manner.

Among the many social affairs given from time to time by the young ladies of Hulings Hall, the Halloween party of last Saturday evening will be remembered by all present as being of an especially delightful and enjoyable character. The informal Halloween spirit was observed in every way possible, the halls and parlors being replete with ghosts, jack-o-lanterns, witches' dens, and fortune-tellers' booths. Masqued figures, said to have been procured from the depths of cemetery ravine, presided over the dressing rooms in a manner truly sepulchral. And yet the presence of these weird phantoms seemed only to add to the mirth and jollity, which reigned throughout the entire evening.

At the west end of the main corridor, embowered in autumnal foliage, stood the punch-bowl, filled with that tempting and delicious beverage which is found only in the fall of the year and is commonly called "sweet cider." The popularity of this corner of the hall was well attested by the frequency with which the capacious bowl had to be replenished. A portion of the dining room, partitioned off with screens, also came in for its share of the attention, for here were served big mellow apples and dainty segments of old-fashioned "pumpkin pie."

The scheme of entertainment for the evening was in the form of a conversation program of eight numbers, the changes being announced by the melodious tones of the famous Hulings Hall dinner-bell. Cosy retreats for "sitting out" the various numbers on the program proved to be numerous, and the clever witches and fortune-tellers were kept busy with numerous calls on their powers of foresight. Dainty souvenirs, in the shape of stars and pumpkins were pinned upon the guests before leaving. Promptly at eleven o'clock, according to laws as immutable as those of the Medes and Persians, the affair broke up.

The committee on arrangements deserves much credit for their part in planning and directing such a charming and entirely successful event.

THE GERMAN CLUB.

The German Club held a special meeting on Friday afternoon at which it was decided to call the club "The German Club of Allegheny College." The club adopted as its motto, "Mehr Licht, Mehr Licht."

The various committees were appointed and Dr. Mulfinger stated that a special program would be given at the next meeting in commemoration of the beginning of the reform movement by Martin Luther. It was decided to make singing a special feature of the meetings and for this purpose, books containing songs written in German will be procured.

LITERARY SOCIETY TO GIVE RECEPTION.

The reception which Allegheny Literary Society was to have given last night has been postponed until Saturday evening of this week. Dr. Mulfinger will speak on "The Idea of the German University." Light refreshments will be served. All young men of the college are invited. The reception will be given in the society hall on the third floor of Bentley Hall.

A new method of electing class officers was tried at Wooster this year. The scheme proposed—that of nominating at one meeting and electing at a subsequent session—was well received by the students and the results are highly satisfactory.

New Musical Organization.

Girls Organize Glee Club—Mr. Manville Secured as Director.

It will doubtless be of general interest to know that the circle of college organizations has been enlarged by the advent of a Girls' Glee Club. This satisfies a long felt need, for the young ladies have been debarred from the musical organizations which are open only to the men. A chorus of twelve voices has been secured. This will be under the leadership of Mr. Manville, of the Pennsylvania College of Music, who will judge of the eligibility of any young lady wishing to join the club.

BRIDGES PLAYS DESERTER.

Star Full-back Dishonorably Deserts His Team in Mid-Season—Student-Body Righteously Indignant.

M. O. Bridges, who entered college this fall as a special student, and who has been playing a star game as full-back on the "varsity" foot ball team, left town Sunday evening for Washington, Pa., accompanied by James, the W. and J. tackle. Bridges was interviewed before leaving the city, and though no definite admission resulted, the general belief on the hill is that he has yielded to inducements offered by the W. and J. management and will soon appear on the Washington line-up.

During his short stay at Allegheny, Bridges has received absolutely no remuneration for his athletic services, the local policy being definite and immutable on that point. The attitude of Washington and Jefferson, however, on the subject of "clean athletics" is too well known to necessitate comment.

The sentiment of the student-body towards the action of W. and J., and in fact towards Bridges himself, is bitter in the extreme. What the final outcome of the affair will be it is difficult to predict.

CO-EDS GET CAPRICIOUS

AN UNFORTUNATE KIDDING-MATCH.

Girls Perpetrate a Huge Joke, Which is Misunderstood and Results in Scrimmage—Unique but Deplorable Affair.

Under the maple at the corner of the chapel sidewalk, a place that for years has constituted the daily rendezvous of precocious adolescence waiting to "see the girls go in," were gathered last Friday morning some fifty or sixty pretty co-eds, smiling and mischievous, ready to do their worst to the embarrassed and disconcerted male who should venture to run their gauntlet. Bored to the point of exasperation—in so far as a charming co-ed can become exasperated—by the boorish conduct of certain untutored individuals whose daily custom it is to line up along the sidewalk until the young ladies have entered the building, the latter took advantage of a good opportunity to turn the tables and let the offenders see themselves as others see them.

Innocent and guilty suffered alike. One inoffensive and unsuspecting victim, bent on no more criminal errand than the posting of a notice on the chapel bulletin, stood the torture for a minute and beat a hasty retreat. Facetious femininity was too much for him. And others underwent a similar experience, ingloriously disappearing amidst cheers and comic cries of derision. The joke was a good one and should have educated a general laugh, which in the nature

DR. ADAMS SPEAKS ON NATURE OF ART

AN ENTERTAINING LECTURE.

A Brief Synopsis of the First of the Series of Lectures by Dr. Adams—Subject, "What is Art?"

Each week seems to have some new treat in store for the college students. They are now enjoying a series of very interesting and instructive lectures on the subject of Art. Dr. John Quincy Adams, of Evanston, Ill., formerly occupying the chair of Political Science in the University of Pennsylvania, is the artist. He is neither painter nor sculptor; yet he has made an exhaustive study of his theme and has Sargeant and Whistler among his intimate friends. His first lecture was given in Ford Memorial chapel last Thursday evening on "What is Art?"

He introduced his lecture by saying that no one knows what art is. Commonly it is divided into painting and sculpture, but this is a misconception. Art runs all through life.

But though art has such a broad scope yet it has fundamental principles. These principles are proportion, harmony, and unity. The form, color and grouping of all art is determined by them. Proportion is the corner stone of art. Nature teaches it to us in the giant oak. It is often felt when we cannot express it. Harmony is simply defined when we call it the going together of things in a nice way. The oak has no two limbs alike, yet it is harmonious. But graft on a limb the branch of an elm and see what discord is the result. Harmony, as proportion, runs through all life. As an illustration of unity take Tintoretto's Crucifixion. The picture in itself is a unit. Not a nail could be added nor one removed without detracting from the picture. Hence everything must be complete in itself. These fundamental principles apply as well when art is expressed by action. In applying these elements the artist must be true. Be what you are is the way to live an artist's life and live in your work.

The question then arises, "What is the work of Art?" The mode of expression, the way a thing is done, is the work of art. So, art is clearly not limited to painting and sculpture. Proportion, harmony and unity apply throughout the world. Art is as broad as human life and art is no respecter of persons.

Confusion arises in distinguishing the subject matter—matter of art from art itself. Ruskin wrote on "what is art," but he never thought out "what is art." The distinction is clearly brought out in the celebrated painting "Breaking Home Ties." The young man leaving home is the subject matter. The way the artist told the story is the art. Thus, art is the method of expression, the way you do it. The subject matter is the theme or material.

Is the artist's purpose to imitate nature? This question arises in finding the relation of fact to art. The artist does not endeavor to imitate nature, but attempts to give his own impressions. No one can copy nature. The aim of the artist is to make as he sees. However, when the key-note is chosen, the artist must keep on the key. The harmony or relationship must be true and not a false note must enter.

In closing Mr. Adams said that the kingdom of art is in yourself. The standard is personal.

In place of the class rush the Sophomores of Heidelberg give a banquet to the Freshmen.

Kappa Kappa Gamma.

On Friday evening last, the young ladies of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority entertained about one hundred of their friends at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Harper on Diamond Park.

The young ladies proved very charming entertainers and everyone enjoyed a pleasant evening. The Young Northwestern Orchestra, composed of young boys, rendered delightful music. A large punch bowl was located in one corner of the drawing-room and received its usual share of attention. Excellent refreshments were served and each guest was presented with a memento of the occasion in the shape of a gilt key.

CLASSICAL CLUB.

FIRST REGULAR MEETING OF THE YEAR A DECIDED SUCCESS.

The Classical Club held its first regular meeting for the year 1905-6 in the classical room of the college library. The attendance was good, and judging by the new spirit of enthusiasm displayed during the evening, the club is to have the most successful year in its history.

After the customary business session an instructive and entertaining program was rendered. Mr. Crawford briefly reviewed the summer numbers of the classical and archaeological publications received at the library. Mr. R. N. Taylor, of the preparatory school faculty, then read the principal paper of the evening, his subject being "Classical Study at Harvard." Mr. Taylor conveyed a very valuable and comprehensive idea of classical study at the eastern university as compared with that of a small college such as Allegheny. He also gave his hearers an interesting insight into the Harvard classroom, dormitory and boarding hall. At the close of his paper the essayist illustrated his subject with photographs of Harvard buildings.

ART APPRECIATION.

SECOND LECTURE BY DR. ADAMS.

An Interesting and Instructive Address Delivered in College Chapel.

Dr. John Quincy Adams gave the second of his course of lectures on Art Saturday afternoon at Ford Memorial chapel. Dr. Adams again proved himself a most interesting speaker. As in his previous lecture he showed that he thoroughly believed in ones being himself. In him that artifice is so often found in the platform speaker is absent, and as a result his hour's discourse on "How To Appreciate Art" made a most pleasing impression.

In a very informal way Dr. Adams opened his lecture by telling of the American's first impression of foreign customs. He showed the utterly absurd way in which they appeared to the American who had not the foreign Entered as Second-Class matter October 30, 1904, at the Postoffice at Meadville, Pa., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Although from every Friday's standpoint the unfortunate occurrence of last Friday morning is to be censured, one feature of the deplorable affair was of a character so disgraceful and shameless as to deserve public rebuke of no ambiguous nature. This was the feature of irreverence.

That certain benighted and thoughtless individuals should let fly to the winds the fundamental principles of decent decorum and good breeding, furnishes material for serious thought; but that the clownish disorder and hubbub caused by these individuals should interfere with or interrupt a stately religious rite of such solemn and quiet charm as characterizes our daily chapel service is nothing less than a thing of reproach on the whole student-body. It is such proceedings as this, taking place from time to time in the colleges and universities of this country, that contribute real force and conviction to the charge of moral laxity brought with increasing frequency of late years against the collegiate world.

The matter of foot ball ethics which is at present Relations troubling the whole academic world with its difficulty and seemingly insoluble problems, is brought home to us with peculiar force by an occurrence which today is demanding first attention in the eyes of the local student-body.

The questions which present themselves by virtue of this occurrence might be stated about as follows: first, shall a player on any Allegheny team desert with impunity his team and college at mid-season in favor of a rival team and college for no other purpose than his own pecuniary advantage? Second, shall representatives of a rival college team with impunity attempt to make propositions, whether pecuniary or otherwise, to Allegheny players—propositions which are intended to result in the withdrawal of said players to the rival college?

The first question appears to us undebatable. Any student, whether athlete or no, having once matriculated with a school or college, is in honor bound to remain true to that school or college until the end of the regular scholastic session. In the same way, any athlete, having once joined any athletic team connected with his college, is in honor bound to remain true to that team until it has won or lost the last contest of the season. No honorable man would do otherwise.

But unfortunately there are dishonorable men. It is this fact that makes possible the second question in our discussion. And it may be urged by some that this problem is a debatable one. The argument may be brought up that, admitting the fault of the player in listening to any outside proposition, yet those who make the proposition are not liable to blame. To them the matter is a mere business transaction; they are true to their own college and their own interests. What more could be desired?

The fallacy of this argument lies in the selfish and viciously unsportsmanlike spirit, which in our estimation lies at the foundation of the whole foot ball problem. The essential object of all true sport is "to play," and it involves cleanness, generosity, and straightforwardness; the essential object of present-day foot ball is "to win," and its very existence, it would seem, depends on impurity, selfishness, and underhanded methods.

Allegheny has always stood for "clean athletics." In this respect she has fostered and encouraged true sport with more ardor, perhaps, than any other college in Western Pennsylvania. Washington and Jefferson college has always stood for dirty athletics, and her influence in this direction has been more harmful, it is probable, than any of her sister colleges.

But "clean" athletics and "dirty" athletics cannot go together. Athletic relations between the two schools can never, under present conditions, be placed on a satisfactory basis. It would seem advisable, then, that such relations be discontinued until certain marked and radical changes be seen in W. and J.'s athletic policy.

ALUMNI NOTES.

J. H. Sporr, '02, has a government position of civil engineering at Philadelphia with a salary of $1,500 a year. The position is only temporary, but bids fair at an early date to be permanent. Mr. Sporr recently passed the civil service examination with the result that he has secured this position before his name was reached on the list of aspirants.

J. R. Andrews, '90, is junior member of the new law firm, Crowley & Andrews, at Randolph, N. Y.

O. E. Carr, '00, is in the employ of the B. & O. railroad.

A. D. Horton, '98, is superintendent of schools at New Kensington, Pa.

A. H. Appleby, '02, is secretary and treasurer of the Ashville and Panama Telephone Co., in which he is one of the principal stockholders.

Ralph W. Holmes, '98, is practicing medicine at Chillicothe, Ohio.

Walter S. Borland, '00, met with an accident in Oil City last Thursday, which resulted in the amputation of a portion of the right hand. "Ching," as he was familiarly known while in college, was the star all-around athlete for over four years at Allegheny. After leaving college, he has coached the University of Louisiana foot ball team up to the last year, when he went into business with his father. "Ching" has several warm friends in the college and town who will sincerely regret his misfortune.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

MUNICIPAL ART, BY JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

An Interesting Lecture Given in the Chapel of the Stone Church.

Municipal Art was the theme of Dr. John Quincy Adams at the chapel of the First M. E. church on Monday evening. In his previous lectures Dr. Adams made his teaching very forceful. Some ninety stereopticon views kept the audience alternately charmed by the beauty of European cities and rebuked by the examples of American neglect in regard to the small things that go to make a city artist's.

The lecture was very systematic, taking up in detail the method of improvement. Views were presented showing what was possible in the places where conditions seemed hopeless. Suggestions were everywhere evident for the improvement of Meadville. The beautiful river banks of foreign lands could not help but bring to mind the unkept structures of French creek, where the erstwhile "silvery curves" have been ravished by the hand of man.

Dr. Adams also laid stress upon the value of sculpture in the public square. Not only should the soldier and the scholar be represented but let the common man and labor be exalted to its true place.

Finally the plan for beautifying Cleveland was sketched. Many fine views were presented that show the work that is going on for the betterment of the Forest City. The Washington plan was also presented in a way that made the audience feel that the Americans have a great work in the improvement of their cities. They could not fail then to appreciate Dr. Adams' call to spread his message of art.

Exchange Department

Three Columbia college Sophomores have been denied all college privileges, banished from the campus, and suspended for one year for hazing, in violation of the honor agreement.

The social functions of the fraternities and sororities at Syracuse are beginning to detract from the scholarship of the university and the faculty has decided to restrict them. The new rules are well received.

The question Western Reserve University has submitted to Ohio Wesleyan for their annual debate reads: "Resolved, That Congress delegate the power to regulate and determine railway rates to a commission or bureau, the decisions of which shall be their own force, effective." The constitutionality of the commission is assumed and it is so limited that no act of Congress from the date the question was submitted (Oct. 20) until the debate, shall be considered.

of things, would have ended the matter.

But unfortunately an erroneous idea began to pervade the masculine element to the effect that the perpetrators of the joke were a bevy of motinous and belligerent Freshman girls, defiantly announcing their intention not to be bound by the lower class rules recently passed. At any rate the matter was not received in the spirit in which it was given. Un easiness filled the atmosphere and presently a plot was on foot to rush the girls inside.

The scene which followed is best left undescribed. The amazonian spirit, when reduced to a practical modern issue, is neither so artistic nor so laudable as its original prototype. Suffice it to say that the affair was carried so far as to exceed the bounds of conventionality and decent decorum. The final result was that the girls were temporarily locked out of chapel by their antagonists and the procedure of the chapel service was sadly interrupted and interfered with.

ART APPRECIATION.

point of view. In like way he illustrated the incongruity of a conventional New York dinner to the young farmer who was accustomed to a much simpler thing. These things all go to show that all must get into the other fellow's point of view in order to appreciate the other fellow's ways and work.

Then Dr. Adams took up the scientific trend of mind of the day, saying that at present we were all living in the great realm of science. He contrasted this science with art. The methods of science and art are radically different. Science must always be analytical while the moment art is begun to be analyzed the art itself is lost. Art is a group—a thing symmetrical from which anything detracted or separated means its ruin.

In language, art and science are again opposed. In science the terms are exact, and straight to the point. The phraseology of science must be definite to the extreme. On the other hand the language of art is only relative. In no two places can a word or phrase have the same meaning, because no two objects in art are the same. No artist can paint two pictures that are exactly alike.

Again these two great subjects must differ in methods of appreciation. A person may have all the facts of art at his tongue's end, yet not be able to appreciate the art itself. Fine art has always the power of showing appeal to the emotion upon every presentation. In science the first realization of a great truth creates an emotion of joy, but this emotion can never be felt in the same strength upon a second view of the truth. In art a great truth not only impresses the student at first but it grows upon him, ever appealing in a stronger way. In science quality is the great point, in art quality is everything.

To teach people how to appreciate art, it is best to start first with the common things about them. The simple things of man's experience are those things through which the teacher can make the strongest appeal. The story is told of some shipwrecked sailors who had been adrift for days without water. They finally sighted a ship and cried out for water to quench came the cry, "Dip down, you are in the Amazon." So the teacher of art their thirst. Back over the waves must first cry out, "dip down, you are already in the field of your subject." There in the field about him the pupil may find ample field for expressing art.

First of all let the pupil remember the three fundamentals—harmony, unity and proportion. Then take the simple things of nature and look always for the simple structural lines. Simple structural lines may best be defined by citing the case of the young man weighing six hundred pounds. He was not an object of beauty, because years before his structural lines had been lost to sight.

Dr. Adams then discussed the so called hand-carved furniture of today. In his keen, witty way he showed that much of this was worthless because structural lines were lost; the great knobs and warts being nothing but symbols of expense. He then related the incident of an old uncarved Chippendale chair that entered his home some years ago and drove its modern associates one by one to the attic by its simplicity of truthfulness.

All these good lessons were finally clinched by the exhibition of a few vases and desk ornaments that Dr. Adams presented. The use of these simple little objects cried out against the sham of useless decoration in a striking way.

THE SIG'S MEGAPHONE.

Way back in the time of Father Penn, An Indian wld strolled through our glen.

Do you want to know why he interests us?

I will tell you the tale of this blunder-buss.

Neath the Psi Psi tree he decided to shoot

An owl which disturbed h's thoughts with a hoot.

But alas when he did he lit on his back

For the gun recoiled with a terrible crack.

In disgust he arose; with a curse and a swing

He threw the gun in the Psi Psi spring.

There it lay and rusted for many a day,

And when finally found it was used in this way.

To those on the hill the fact is well known,

That for rooting and yelling a good megaphone

Is much needed and so, in the year eighty-three,

When the shot gun was found in the spring neath the tree,

It was thought that a relic so worthy of fame

Should be changed into something preserving the same.

So the Sigs with their genius for quick transformations,

Found a means for producing with reverberations

College yells and hurrahs through a fine megaphone,

And this to their glory they still call their own.

Syracuse students had a monster celebration on the occasion of their victory over Colgate.

MORE FOOT BALL TALK.

What the Minnesota Alumni Weekly Says of the Foot Ball Question.

The following article, clipped from the columns of the Minnesota Alumni Weekly, is significant as showing the condition of foot ball in a prominent western university. The open admission that a revision of foot ball would mean a revolution of foot ball furnishes food for thought.

The evils of foot ball are not evils which are inherent in the game. The game itself is calculated to foster the harder virtues which lie at the basis of true manhood. The evils which have centered about foot ball are the evils of the age in which we live. The brutality at which this special crusade is aimed is but another expression of the disregard of the right of others which among the rich finds its expression in oppressive monopolies and among the poor in unions whose membership is limited in order to limit competition.

That there are those who recognize the evils and who are making an effort to eradicate the evils is a most healthful sign.

Foot ball is a noble game and there is no question that it is worth saving but it is to be saved it must be saved from itself and its self-styled supporters. The real friends of foot ball are those who recognize its good points without shutting their eyes to the dangers which lurk in foot ball gone mad.

We have thought it best to point out some of the dangers which threaten the game, believing as we have said before, that the real friends of foot ball are those who want to see it what it might be, and what it ought to be, and who cannot shut their eyes to certain tendencies, nay certain practices, which are demoralizing not alone to the sport, but to student ideals and modes of thinking and living.

There have been no end of rules made to govern the relationship of colleges competing for foot ball honors, and for the most part these rules have been a constant source of trouble, each institution trying to keep the letter of the law regardless of its spirit. There is just one single rule, easily enforced, which will do away with most of the evils of the game—this rule is:

Every student trying for the foot-ball team must be a bona fide student pursuing the regular amount of college work and must keep his record above the passing grade.

We freely admit that the enforcement of this rule would create a revolution—but would a revolution be undesirable?

Veith's, 913 Water Street

During this year the roll of the Y. W. C. A. has been enlarged, most of the new girls having become members. With this addition to the membership the meetings have become wonderfully interesting, partly on account of the spirit the new girls have inspired.

Y. M. C. A.
 The Y. M. C. A. is holding some very successful and helpful meetings each week. On Monday evening, Oct. 16th, Rev. Mr. Bugbee, of the Stone church, gave an interesting talk at a well-attended meeting. On Oct. 23 Chas. W. Gill, of the Junior class, lead the meeting and spoke on the "Influence of the Spiritual Life." The meetings this year have been of especial value and all men of the college and preparatory school should make a special effort to be present. A program has been carefully prepared for this term and men of ability have been secured to lead. It is urged that all avail themselves of this opportunity.

One on the President.
 The following anecdote of President Roosevelt's youth is being told in England:
 When Roosevelt was a student at Harvard he was required to recite a poem in public declamation. He got as far as a line which read: "When Greece her knees in suppliance bent," when he stuck there. Again he repeated, "When Greece her knees...." but could get no farther. The teacher waited patiently, finally remarking, "Grease her knees again, Roosevelt, then, perhaps she'll go."
 Some very valuable and interesting old relics were found in one of the Oh'io Wesleyan buildings which was being repaired this summer.
