April 30, 1895 -

Dear Miss Tarbell;

I decided not to go to the Hague for the Conference - as you may recall that we discussed the matter for moment at the Fifth Avenue dinner the night before J.A. and the other

right you spoke of the possibility of going over

later to study conditions and I impulsively
 suggested myself as traveling companion.
 I want very much to be near the war
 scenes not only to feel the sentiment
 and be in the atmosphere but also because I should like to crystalize certain plans that have been in my mind for many years about the

 reorganization of the Red Cross. When the time of reconstruction comes, I think some of us will have to be courageous enough to formulate the new
 ethics of war & peace.
 I, of course, do not want to intrude upon you and I believe you would be quite frank
 but should your plans for the journey take definite shape & shape

you really - honest & true - want me to go with you - I think I could drop New York and Henry Street, & I would see
important enough,

Mr. Seligman has opened up his back camp and the guides are taking admirable care of me. I was driven in retreat to finish the Atlantic Monthly articles and the new chapters for the book.

With affectionate

reetings

Lillian D. Wald,
