Dear Miss Tarbell:

I intended to go back to the office after luncheon yesterday and send you the names of some people who I thought might do for the position of which you spoke to me. I was detained, however, later than I anticipated and had just time to pack my bag and get the train for Washington. After I got on the train I remembered my promise and telegraphed Miss Barker to send you some names of which I had spoken to her. But I am not sure that she will send you what you want.

One application was very recently filled out and from the looks of it I should say that the lady, whose name I think was Farmer, would be a very good person for you. I have not seen the bag, but her experience seems good.

If you haven't filled the position by the time I return to New York Friday morning I will go into the matter more thoroughly.

Faithfully yours,

Arthur T. Lane
