Dear Mrs. Meloney:

You remember perhaps that last year I did an article for the Community Chest people and you thought well enough of it to publish it. Their campaign is on again and the confusion in the public mind about what Uncle Sam is and is not doing for the needy is working against hospitals, nurse service and all these private undertakings which have been developed in the last thirty or forty years. It is tough business to look after these things I know and people everywhere are squirming out of the obligations. I have written a little piece [redacted] to clear up the confusion. Would you care to see it? Busy as you are I do not want to trouble you unless you feel interest enough in the matter to look at a short piece from the pen of your

Affectionate friend
