

"Hearthstone",
Higher Brixham,
Devon,
ENGLAND.
6th. April, 1935.

Dear Miss Tarbell,

I cannot tell you how your praise of my books has moved me, or how happy I am to learn that you have softened a bit toward poor Mary Todd. The public treatment of Mary has always more or less crucified her relatives, who realized her short-comings but love her dearly nevertheless.

I only wish I could drop in for tea with you, but you will observe by this heading that I am in England and only received your letter yesterday.

With grateful affection,

Henri Morris

See Miss Tarbell's letter Feb. 18, 1935