Dearest Julie:

I intended for you to post-poned your trip west, but I should have been desolate had I arrived in New York and found you fled - One thing that brings us East is to be near you.

Your plan fits in with ours perfectly. I only plan to come in to the City three times, and one of them shall be on Thursday the 2nd.

Please let us have no other guests for lunch, then we can have a good intimate talk. If you could put us up at the Oak Club for that afternoon, so ~~we~~ could have a room and rest a bit, then Ore could dress for his Poetry dinner, and I could dress for the other dinner here. I had already asked Miss de Saum if I could bring a guest, for my cousin and Peter will come in and get me and take me down to the P. & B. Club, and then we will motor out to New Rochelle. I have not redeemed our tickets, so if you will add one to yours and mine I shall be grateful. Miss de Saum did not say how much they are, but we can arrange that later -

I am only telling two or three things that we are

Canning, for I have promised to go slow
and balance myself.

Your decision to cut out of the Oregonian Amplifier seems a very wise one - Ever since I had six weeks of sea-bathing at Bute Creek, I have been on the up-grade.

Get your self a fine cloak, and dispose with your modesty and just make up your mind
to back in the altogether.
I stayed out on a cat
two hours every day
dressed like Eve!

How good it would be
to see you!

Your devoted

Deane -
