Mr. J. A. Perry,
Office of Fuller E. Callaway,
LaGrange, Ga.

Dear Mr. Perry:

I came in from the country yesterday and found your letter of May 14, with the corrected copy of my article. Let me thank you for having given your personal attention to the matter.

I was very much ashamed of myself when I realized that I had let the copy go out with the name misspelled. Of course the correction will be made.

Mr. Callaway's point I understand in regard to the order I quoted. He is quite right in thinking that there would be somebody that would misconstrue, however carefully I explained. You said that if I could rewrite it in such a way as to meet this difficulty and save the points brought out it would be satisfactory. That I have done. I have cut the order out, have mentioned no amount, simply saying that one man was making only about a third as much as another, and that a graduated bonus was offered according to the amount a man was making. This, I think, covers entirely Mr. Callaway's objection, and, while it is not as satisfactory from my point of view as his autographed copy of the order would have been, yet I am only too glad to make the change in order to save the story.

I am very glad Mr. Calloway has decided to go to Johns Hopkins for a real rest. I am sure he needs it. He has been running at such a tremendous pace for these twenty years that he probably needs exactly what he says he does, a thorough overhauling; and if it is nothing organic, you can count on their sending him back to you sound one of these days.

With many thanks for your kindness and best regards to everybody, believe me,

Very sincerely yours,
