My dear Miss Tarbell:

You should hear from Mr. Dashiell of Scribner's within the next day or two.

Immediately after telephoning you, we looked in our files for a copy of the article, but then remembered that the situation was this: We had made three copies of it, sending one to you. The first copy sent to Scribner's was lost, so we sent them our third and remaining copy. This had to be done in great haste as they wanted to make a decision at once (so they said), and the result was that we did not have time to copy the article.

If you have not a copy, I am sure Mr. Dashiell will let you have the manuscript which he has.

It seems to me that one or two changes might be made in order to bring in the Economic Security bill, as this certainly has altered many of our talking points in private social work.

We shall be very glad to help you out with information along this line if you so desire.

We are tremendously happy that we are to have this article of yours in print. It is an excellent one and one which I know will be widely read.

Cordially yours,

Louise Franklin Baer
