Form 100

February 25, 1937.

Miss Ida Tarbell,
120 East 19th Street,
New York City.

My dear Miss Tarbell:

I have chortled a lot over the New Yorker Story. I imagine the "coaxing voice" was none other than old D. Worthington - and you certainly did paint a marvellous picture of the broadcast with all its lovely absurdities. Really, it is priceless - and I appreciate so much your sending it to me.

I take it that it is okay for me to make it known that you will accept a few radio engagements. I shall keep you posted of anything that develops, the minute it becomes definite - and of course I shall make no commitments without your approval. (really couldn't anyway, even if I wanted to).

Things are moving swiftly in the new office. I hope you will find it possible to drop in soon and have a peek.

Cordially,

Dorothy Worthington
