Dear Miss Tarbell:

I went down and talked with Mr. Graeve today, and I am enclosing copy of a letter that I have written him outlining the understanding with regard to articles by you. The only change is that he understood the articles might be three thousand words, so I put in "not over three thousand words". If there is anything you thought ought to be changed or added in the understanding, please let me know.

Yours sincerely,

Paul R. Reynolds

Dear Mr. Graeve:

I am writing you a letter simply to confirm my understanding with you about the articles by Miss Ida M. Tarbell.

You would like her to write three or four articles for you not to be over three thousand words in length, the understanding being that in each case she will get your approval of the topic before writing the article. If you have topics to suggest at any time she will be glad to know about them and to talk them over with you, and if she has topics she will suggest them in the same way to you for your approval. It is understood that you will pay her one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500.) apiece for such articles, that this sum is to give you the first American serial rights.

If this arrangement is all right you might let me have a line confirming it.

As I told you, I think Miss Tarbell would be glad to talk with Mr. Moore at any time that would be convenient to him.

Yours sincerely,

Oscar Graeve, Esq.
