Dear Miss Tarbell:

It was just like you to send me an autographed copy of your book. Yes, in spite of the admonishment, I am still a hero worshiper, yet every time I tried to tell you something - yes even untrue - about him I found you even a greater hero worshiper than I was!

I am taking the book down to the country and will now read it with great pleasure. It was certainly a hard and tedious task for you, coming as it did when you were having illness at home, and those of us who do worship Mr. Young will always be in your debt for having recorded so well and in such a friendly spirit the fine life he has led. And we will hear much more from him yet.

My only worry is that you will not consider me now an unforgivable critic. You did a splendid job.

With personal regards,

Very sincerely yours,

Stuart M. Crocker
