Mr. T. M. Reynolds
Tyler, Eames, Wright & Hooper
Ames Building
Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. Reynolds:

Will you help me in a little matter - the checking up of a name that I am using in my Young book? If I could get to the library I could do it myself, of course, but I am confined to the house this week with influenza and I am taking the shortest cut which is writing you.

In Mr. Young's time there was at the Boston bar an eminent lawyer - Benton. - I have an interesting bit about him which Mr. Young told me and I am not sure of his initials. I have them as J. H. Is that right? I shall add it to the long list of favors which you have already granted me if you will set me right on this.

The manuscript of my little sketch has finally gone to the printer and I am expecting proofs soon. I have not been able to use more than a fragment of the material gathered in Boston, but what I have used I hope will be approved by his friends, though I know that I cannot expect in any way to satisfy you.

I hope that you are well, dear Mr. Reynolds, and that the readjustments which Mr. Tyler's death brought on the office has not weighed too heavily on you.

With all good wishes

Very sincerely yours
