Dear Miss Jones:

I do remember you having written me about Lincoln's appointment of a substitute in the Civil War, and I replied, I think, that I had never followed up the matter. In looking over my notes I find I have nothing that would be of any use to you. I am sorry.

By all means put together what you have in as interesting a way as you can. The article may bring you still further information. That sometimes happens.

And thank you for your kind words about "All in the Day's Work" as well as your good wishes for my future.

Wishing you success with your article, believe me

Very sincerely yours

Miss Mildred Emery Jones
