

MISS MARY E. STORY
GREENFIELD
OHIO

June 20 1934

Dear Miss Tarbell:

That brief sketch of you in the July Reader's Digest reminded me how much I have missed by not knowing you personally.

I was once at Chautauque New York some time when my friend Bishop Lucock was there - and he urged me to call on you - I was not brave enough for that - in those days.

Bishop Lucock and I were college friends and his son Halford has kept up the connection - Hal says

~~days~~ he would never write any thing if I had not kept after him.
but that is not true - it was in him -

He sends me all his books - telling me to take the blame for them - one writer - writing of Hol's last book "Contemporary American Literature and Religion" - says "many writers are looking for Cyclone cellars" -

Excuse this note - Your name always recalls my friends the Luccobis - This note does not require any answer -

Sincerely,
Mary E. Story
